No 1468 London August 14 1964

Price 6d (US 20 cents)

Editorial

Since the place of the rate of Makarios alone for the recent outbreak made its resolution more urgent. of violence in Cyprus is to simplify the problem and see it out of context. Turkey too must take a share of the blame. Nor can we conveniently ignore the part that Britain has played since the war in the creation of violence in Cyprus, and the present situation may have been intensified by Britain's reluctance to take the Cyprus problem to the United Nations earlier this year.

When Peace News went to press it was too early to judge whether the cease fire would be maintained, but one fact had emerged clearly: the crisis has made it essential to stop further postponement of finding a solution to the island's problems.

To a large extent the crisis was engineered by Turkey to achieve exactly this result. And what actions Turkey took were given added force by the Greek-

In addition, because of its effects on NATO, America and Britain cannot allow an open war between Turkey and Greece to develop. A collapse of the eastern wing of the alliance would provide a convenient opening for communism. (America can exert con-Greece. The amount of aid received by Greece in the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1963, was 31.5 million dollars. Turkey received 127.5 million dollars in the same year.)

There was hope on Tuesday that Mr Tuomioja, the United Nations mediator The solutions suggested for the long-get talks going between Greek and Turkish delegates in Geneva. The pre-vious refusal of the Greeks to talk to the Turks, because they felt that talks

The solutions suggested for the long-term problems have been various and none of them seems particularly satis-factory. Makarios has already rejected enosis (the union of Cyprus with Greece) would only underline existing differ- coupled with adequate recompense for

To place the blame on President conflict moving into a wider arena the demands that the Turks have made opposed by the Turks. as conditions for their part in the ceasefire must be met. They insist that the Greek Cypriots withdraw to positions held before August 5. This would mean that the Greek Cypriots would have to give up three Turkish Cypriot villages in the north-west of the island which they have occupied since that date. They are not likely to surrender them easily. And with Turkish "reconnaisance flights" continuing until the Greek forces move back, another crisis could flare up at any time. It can only be hoped that the Greeks will see a settlement of long-term grievances as more urgent than their immediate political aims.

ences and would not bring a solution Turkey and the Turkish Cypriots, in-

post free trial

US: 10 weeks 2560 for 1 dollar

Any workable solution will involve a revision of the constitution that the Governments of Britain, Greece and Turkey forced on the Cypriot people in 1959. But whatever happens, the Turkish Cypriots must be made to feel secure. If this is achieved by some kind of independent guarantee, it will be of little use if the relationship of hatred and distrust between the two peoples continues to exist.

As was argued in an article in Peace

News, February 21:

"The initial responsibility lies with the Greek Cypriots, as the dominant group, to win the trust of the Turks. It is no use simply promising to respect Turkish rights as Makarios has several times done in the past few weeks; they must act in such a way that the Turks will trust them to do so. After the events of the last few years, this is an almost superhuman

Editorial

Silvers sold free, Please sold names covered to the covered to the Makarios alone for the recent outbreak made its resolution more urgent. of violence in Cyprus is to simplify the problem and see it out of context. Turkey too must take a share of the blame. Nor can we conveniently ignore the part that Britain has played since the war in the creation of violence in Cyprus, and the present situation may have been intensified by Britain's reluctance to take the Cyprus problem to the United Nations earlier this year.

When Peace News went to press it was too early to judge whether the cease fire would be maintained, but one fact had emerged clearly: the crisis has made it essential to stop further postponement of finding a solution to the island's problems.

To a large extent the crisis was engineered by Turkey to achieve exactly this result. And what actions Turkey took were given added force by the Greek-Cypriot appeal to Russia, Egypt and Israel to come to their aid.

On Tuesday it appeared that Russia was refusing to become involved in the conflict, President Shazar of Israel had also refused to take sides and had sent 10,000 dollars through Red Cross to be used to help Greek and Turkish casualties, and Egypt was taking up a stand as an

In addition, because of its effects on NATO, America and Britain cannot allow an open war between Turkey and Greece to develop. A collapse of the eastern wing of the alliance would provide a convenient opening for communism. (America can exert considerable pressure on both Turkey and Greece. The amount of aid received by Greece in the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1963, was 31.5 million dollars. Turkey received 127.5 million dollars in the same year.)

There was hope on Tuesday that Mr Tuomioja, the United Nations mediator in the Cyprus dispute, would manage to The solutions suggested for the longget talks going between Greek and Turkish delegates in Geneva. The previous refusal of the Greeks to talk to the Turks, because they felt that talks would only underline existing differences and would not bring a solution any nearer, seemed to have been tempered slightly by the conflict. One hopeful sign was that the Greek Government has appointed a new, more senior The setting up of an international frondelegate to go to Geneva. But if tier across the island, which would make United Nations negotiations failed, it complete partition between the two seemed certain that the British and communities, has also been rejected by American Governments would take a the Greeks. And Makarios's apparent joint initiative over Cyprus.

To place the blame on President conflict moving into a wider arena the demands that the Turks have made opposed by the Turks. as conditions for their part in the ceasefire must be met. They insist that the Greek Cypriots withdraw to positions held before August 5. This would mean that the Greek Cypriots would have to give up three Turkish Cypriot villages in the north-west of the island which they have occupied since that date. They are not likely to surrender them easily. And with Turkish "reconnaisance flights" continuing until the Greek forces move back, another crisis could flare up at any time. It can only be hoped that the Greeks will see a settlement of long-term grievances as more urgent than their immediate political aims.

> term problems have been various and none of them seems particularly satisfactory. Makarios has already rejected enosis (the union of Cyprus with Greece) coupled with adequate recompense for Turkey and the Turkish Cypriots, including some form of base in the island for Turkey, and there is no sign that the Turks would accept any such plan.

post free trial

US: 10 weeks for 1 dollar

Any workable solution will involve a revision of the constitution that the Governments of Britain, Greece and Turkey forced on the Cypriot people in 1959. But whatever happens, the Turkish Cypriots must be made to feel secure. If this is achieved by some kind of independent guarantee, it will be of little use if the relationship of hatred and distrust between the two peoples continues to exist.

As was argued in an article in Peace News, February 21:

"The initial responsibility lies with the Greek Cypriots, as the dominant group, to win the trust of the Turks. It is no use simply promising to respect Turkish rights as Makarios has several times done in the past few weeks; they must act in such a way that the Turks will trust them to do so. After the events of the last few years, this is an almost superhuman task; if it is not done, it is not likely that any political arrangements that are made will have much success."

Perhaps the recent violence has made the task even more difficult, but one result of it has been to make the Greeks less of a dominant group. Turkey's show of strength, and the lack of outaim of establishing an independent side support for the Greek-Cypriot effort. "observer." But even the threat of the Before any discussions can be successful Greek-Cypriot state would obviously be must cause Makarios to think again.

Theodore Roszak

TRIARA

Nor can we conveniently ignore the part that Britain has played since the war in the creation of violence in Cyprus, and the present situation may have been intensified by Britain's reluctance to take the Cyprus problem to the United Nations earlier this year.

When Peace News went to press it was too early to judge whether the cease fire would be maintained, but one fact had emerged clearly: the crisis has made it essential to stop further postponement of finding a solution to the island's problems.

To a large extent the crisis was engineered by Turkey to achieve exactly this result. And what actions Turkey took were given added force by the Greek-Cypriot appeal to Russia, Egypt and Israel to come to their aid.

On Tuesday it appeared that Russia was flict, President Shazar of Israel had also refused to take sides and had sent 10,000 dollars through Red Cross to be used to help Greek and Turkish casualties, and Egypt was taking up a stand as an

Greece to develop. A collapse of the eastern wing of the alliance would provide a convenient opening for communism. (America can exert considerable pressure on both Turkey and Greece. The amount of aid received by Greece in the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1963, was 31.5 million dollars. Turkey received 127.5 million dollars in the same year.)

There was hope on Tuesday that Mr Tuomioja, the United Nations mediator in the Cyprus dispute, would manage to The solutions suggested for the longjoint initiative over Cyprus.

that the Greek Cypriots would have to give up three Turkish Cypriot villages in the north-west of the island which they have occupied since that date. They are not likely to surrender them easily. And with Turkish "reconnaisance flights" continuing until the Greek forces move back, another crisis could flare up at any time. It can only be hoped that the Greeks will see a settlement of long-term grievances as more urgent than their immediate political aims.

get talks going between Greek and term problems have been various and Turkish delegates in Geneva. The pre- none of them seems particularly satisvious refusal of the Greeks to talk to factory. Makarios has already rejected the Turks, because they felt that talks enosis (the union of Cyprus with Greece) would only underline existing differ- coupled with adequate recompense for ences and would not bring a solution Turkey and the Turkish Cypriots, inany nearer, seemed to have been tem-cluding some form of base in the island pered slightly by the conflict. One for Turkey, and there is no sign that hopeful sign was that the Greek Govern- the Turks would accept any such plan. United Nations negotiations failed, it complete partition between the two seemed certain that the British and communities, has also been rejected by American Governments would take a the Greeks. And Makarios's apparent "observer." But even the threat of the Before any discussions can be successful Greek-Cypriot state would obviously be must cause Makarios to think again.

in 1959. But whatever happens, the Turkish Cypriots must be made to feel secure. If this is achieved by some kind of independent guarantee, it will be of little use if the relationship of hatred and distrust between the two peoples continues to exist.

As was argued in an article in Peace News, February 21:

"The initial responsibility lies with the Greek Cypriots, as the dominant group, to win the trust of the Turks. It is no use simply promising to respect Turkish rights as Makarios has several times done in the past few weeks; they must act in such a way that the Turks will trust them to do so. After the events of the last few vears, this is an almost superhuman task; if it is not done, it is not likely that any political arrangements that are made will have much success."

refusing to become involved in the con- ment has appointed a new, more senior The setting up of an international fron- Perhaps the recent violence has made delegate to go to Geneva. But if tier across the island, which would make the task even more difficult, but one result of it has been to make the Greeks less of a dominant group. Turkey's show of strength, and the lack of outaim of establishing an independent side support for the Greek-Cypriot effort.

Theodore Roszak

VIETNAM: CRISIS TO ORDER

are easily engineered these days, given work, and it changes that framework the frightening concentration of power not in the least. modern governments enjoy and the appalling control of information the excitement-seeking mass media wield. as ever. It is prosecuting a cruel and And they are, if well staged, the cheapest futile war (albeit against cruel and and quickest way of producing a national totalitarian enemies) on behalf of dicconsensus on even extremely involved tatorial regimes that offer no humane issues. In the heat of crisis, even the and constructive response to the needs most critical intelligence tends to narrow of the Vietnamese people. As time its focus and invest itself in the emer- goes on, the greater the American gency at hand. Alternatives vanish. Complexities dissolve. One's sense of history is overwhelmed by the critical moment; the tangled rights and wrongs of the policies that produced the crisis are dropped from mind. There seems to be no practical course but to trust "our namese torpedo boat attack (and US side," accept official accounts, and cast officials now seen to think that it was one's lot with the powers that be . . . until (hopefully) the crisis passes and come of muddle), that event does noththere is more time to sort things out.

Obviously, nothing is more important than that one resist the pressure of such an enforced consensus and remain critical of both the crisis and of the political context which surrounds it. For the crisis grows out of an historical Crises are handy political devices. They sequence, out of a total policy frame-

In Vietnam the United States remains in a position as hopelessly compromised presence bulks in Vietnam, the more severely the political life of that troubled nation is bound to be warped, the more embittered are its healthy aspirations bound to become.

No matter how dastardly the North Vietnot deliberate aggression, but the outing to redeem the confusion of blunders and injustices American policy has become in SE Asia. It remains as difficult as ever to see how Washington could do any greater service to the Vietnamese than to seize the nearest

continued on page 4

"On second thoughts, I suppose your challenge was unintentional."

POSTAL SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Great Britain and abroad (sea mail): 3 months 9s, 6 months 18s, 1 year 35s. Add 10s p.a. for pamphlets.

AIRMAIL EDITION

North Africa and Middle East: 3 months 10s 6d 6 months 21s, 1 year 40s.

Africa (except N), India, SE Asia: 3 months 11s 6d, 6 months 23s, 1 year 44s.

Australia, New Zealand, and Far East: 3 months 12s 6d, 6 months 25s, 1 year 48s.

North America: $8.50 a year to Peace News, c/o AFSC, 160 North 15th St., Philadelphia 2,

Peace News 5 Caledonian Rd London N1

Special offer for new readers

please send

6 weeks Peace News

post free trial

US: 10 weeks for 1 dollar

2s6d

I enclose

Name

Block letters, please

Address

the telephone number of Peace News and Housmans is div soil village TERminus 4473

printing

Classified

Terms: 6d per word, min. 4s. Discounts for series. Box No. 1s extra. Cash with order (not stamps please). Adverts to reach 5 Caledonian Rd., London, N.1 by first post Monday. Box No. replies to same address. Displayed advertisements rate on application.

Coming events

"EDUCATION in a peaceful society." Book now for this Open Youth Forum (under 30s) on September 5-6 at God-Surrey. Food and accommodation pro-35s each, students £1. Write to Youth, 39 Falconwood Road, Addington, Croydon Tel. Caterham 44950.

PROTEST AGAINST factory farming. Volunteers wanted Saturday morning poster parade, London shopping areas. Animal Machines Action Group. FLA 3285.

Personal

CO-OP SHOPPERS everywhere. By quoting L336943 your purchases pay a dividend to the Peace News fund.

FAMILY PLANNING. American and European methods. Premier, 50 Black Lion St, Brighton. FREE COPIES of Peace News will be sent to potential readers. New readers' trial rate: six weeks 2s 6d post free. Please send names and addresses to Circulation Manager, 5 Caledonian Road, London N.1.

LET US WORRY about your motor insurance: special rates for civil servants and school-teachers - "agreed value" policies. Ask for details now. Morris Hunter Insurance Con-

Discounts for sultants Ltd (P), 37 Victoria Avenue, Southend-Tel Southend 41101. Branch on-sea, Essex. offices Motherwell, Guernsey

> PERSONAL COLUMN LTD, Falcon House, Burnley, Lancs. Pen friends - all hobbies, correspondents in almost every country. All ages. S.a.e. for details.

PLEASE LISTEN IN to Bishop Trevor Huddleston's appeal for children in Tanganyika on the Home Service, Sunday Aug. 16 at 8.25 p.m. STUDENT VOLUNTEERS invited to help Peace News during their holidays. Pre-packing Christmas cards, "spring" cleaning, despatch and general help. Fares and lunches paid. Monday-Friday, 9.30-6. (Wed. to 9.30 p.m.) Write, phone (TER 4473) or call, 5 Caledonian Road, Kings Cross, N.1. WORKING MAN (early 50s), vegetarian, fond children and animals, wishes contact lady. Little boy or small family welcome. Box 326.

Holidays

MANOR HOUSE HOTEL, North Parade, Whitley Bay (Tel 20568). Sea view, TV lounge, parking accommodation. Terms 12s 6d per day B & B, children at reduced rates. OAPs £2 19s 6d per

Publications

CONTACT - a South African Liberal fortnightly with inside news of the struggle against apartheid and colonialism. 6 months 8s 9d, 12 months 17s. Box 1979, Cape Town, S.A. DISCUSS "Alternatives to War and Violence" this winter. 24 eminent contributors. 8s. 3d post free from Leonard Caton, "Newlands,"

Long Rd, Lawford, Manningtree, Essex.

HOUSMANS (the Peace News booksellers) for all peace literature and books, posters, leaflets or campaign materials. Sale or return selections for meetings, etc. Send s.a.e. or call for latest list and SoR terms. 5 Caledonian Road, Kings Cross, London N.1.

SARVODAYA - monthly magazine of the Bhoodan Movement in India, may be obtained from Housmans Bookshop, 5 Caledonian Road, London N.1 at 12s yearly or 1s (post 3d) each

THE RAILWAY REVIEW - weekly railwaymen's paper. Essential reading for those who want the authentic voice of railway workers. tainable 9s a quarter post free from 205 Euston

THE SOCIALIST STANDARD for August con-THE SUCIALIST STANDARD for August contains articles of special interest to all who oppose war. Send PO 2s for this issue and 100 page pamphlet on war in modern society, to Dept PN, Socialist Party of GB, 52 Clapham High St, London S.W.4.

Accommodation vacant

IN CND HOUSE, Regents Park. One double and one single room, £3 per person. Central heating, kitchen/diner. Near underground, heating, kitchen/diner. Near underground, buses. Only peace workers really meaning business should apply. Box 325.

Accomodation wanted

LEEDS. Reasonable unfurn. accommodation wanted. Adult student, wife, baby. Box 323. LIBERTARIAN ORGANISATION requires office accommodation. Box 324.

Diary

As this is a free service we reserve the right to select from notices sent in. To make the service as complete as possible, we urge organisers to:

- 1. Send entries to arrive not later than first post Monday (Friday preferred).
- 2. Include date, town, time, place (hall, street), nature of event, speakers, organisers (and secretary's address).

To publicise full details, book a classified or displayed advertisement.

Remember to order copies of Peace News for your advertised meeting: Sale or Return. From: Circulation Dept., 5 Caledonian Rd., N.1.

14 August, Friday

BIRMINGHAM. 7.30 p.m. 233 Bristol Road (corner Priory Rd) Flat 11. Working group, West Midlands C'ttee of 100.
BIRMINGHAM. 7.45 p.m. The Salutation, Snow Hill. Jazz - all profits to CND.
BRIGHTON. 1 p.m. Friends Mtg House, Ship St. Picnic lunch and discussion. Tea provided, bring own food. In aid of Friends relief work overseas.

15 August, Saturday

LEICESTER. 10 a.m. Gaumont Cinema, Market LEICESTER. 10 a.m. Gaumont Cinema, Market Place. Peace News selling. Contact David Lane, 1 Wentworth Road, phone 21958.

LONDON S.E.3. 10 a.m. 141 Woolacombe Road, Kidbrooke. All-day leafleting, literature selling, canvassing. Phone LEE 6349. Fellowship Party.

LONDON W.C.2. 3-7 p.m. Outside South Africa House, Trafalgar Sq. Poster vigil.

17 August, Monday

LONDON W.C.1. 7.30 p.m. 6 Endsleigh St. London C'ttee of 100 working group meeting.

17-22 August, Mon-Sat

HAYWARDS HEATH. Elfinsward. Anglican Pacifist Fellowship conference. "The last 50 years - the next 50 years?" Speakers inc George Innes (SoF), Irene Jacoby, Francis Noble, Tom Scrutton, Paul Gliddon and Donald Reece. Details from 29 Great James St, W.C.1.

19 August, Wednesday

LONDON W.1. 5.30-7 p.m. Outside American Embassy, Grosvenor Sq. Poster picket. London C'ttee of 100.

20 August, Thursday

LONDON E.11. 8 p.m. Friends Mtg House, Bush Road. Cliff Giles: "Children and Mental Health." PPU.

21 August, Friday

BIRMINGHAM, 7.45 p.m. The Salutation. Snow Hill. Jazz - all profits to CND.

22 August, Saturday

LEICESTER. 10 a.m. Gaumont Cinema, Market Peace News selling. Contact David 1 Wentworth Road, phone 21958. LONDON W.C.2. 3-7 p.m. Outside South Africa House, Trafalgar Square. Poster vigil. C'ttee

Important new peace literature

CYPRUS

2s 6d (3d)

1s 0d (3d)

- a special 48 pp number of War Resistance

2s 6d (3d) CIVILIAN DEFENCE

Adam Roberts, Jerome Frank, Arne Naess and Gene Sharp

5s 6d (3d) PATHOGENESIS OF WAR

Report of the Third Conference of the Medical Association for Prevention of War. 64 pages.

WAR WITHIN MAN 3s 0d (4d)

A psychological inquiry into the roots of destructiveness by Erich Fromm

BALANCE OF RISKS

CND's latest. Tercnce Heelas

CAN CHRISTIANS ACCEPT THE NUCLEAR DETERRENT? 6d (3d)

Christian CND: Diana Collins

SIR ALEC DOUGLAS-HOME 5s 0d (6d)

Audress

Circulation Dept., 5 Caledonian Rd., N.1.

the telephone number of

Peace News and Housmans is dily roll villa TERminus 4473

printing

magazines, pamphlets, newsletters, balance sheets, reports, and all commercial printing

C A Brock & Co Ltd 79 Southern Row London W10

14 August, Friday

BIRMINGHAM. 7.30 p.m. 233 Bristol Road (corner Priory Rd) Flat 11. Working group, West Midlands C'ttee of 100. BIRMINGHAM. 7.45 p.m. The Salutation, Snow Hill. Jazz - all profits to CND. BRIGHTON. 1 p.m. Friends Mtg House, Ship St. Picnic lunch and discussion. Tea provided, bring own food. In aid of Friends relief work overseas relief work overseas.

15 August, Saturday

LEICESTER. 10 a.m. Gaumont Cinema, Market Place. Peace News selling. Contact David Lane, 1 Wentworth Road, phone 21958. LONDON S.E.3. 10 a.m. 141 Woolacombe Road, Kidbrooke. All-day leafleting, literature selling, canvassing. Phone LEE 6349, Fellowship Party. LONDON W.C.2. 3-7 p.m. Outside South Africa House, Trafalgar Sq. Poster vigil. C'ttee of 100. TWICKENHAM. 11 a.m. Kings Head, Twickenham Junc. Open air meeting, Michael Craft. Phone EAL 6520 or TED 4864. INDEC.

16 August, Sunday

FOR EIGHT WEEKS

NAME

Send to: TRIBUNE,

I ENCLOSE 6s (US $1)

ADDRESS

Embassy, Grosvenor Sq. Poster picket. London

19 August, Wednesday LONDON W.1. 5.30-7 p.m. Outside American Embassy, Grosvenor Sq. Poster picket. London C'ttee of 100.

20 August, Thursday

LONDON E.11. 8 p.m. Friends Mtg House, Bush Road. Cliff Giles: "Children and Mental Health." PPU.

21 August, Friday

BIRMINGHAM. 7.45 p.m. The Salutation. Snow Hill. Jazz - all profits to CND.

22 August, Saturday

LEICESTER. 10 a.m. Gaumont Cinema, Market Place. Peace News selling. Contact David Lane, 1 Wentworth Road, phone 21958.

LONDON W.C.2. 3-7 p.m. Outside South Africa
House, Trafalgar Square. Poster vigil. C'ttee OXFORD. 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Carfax. Peace News selling.

22 - 29 August, Sat - Sat

BROMSGROVE, Worcs. Avoncroft, Stoke Prior. Family summer school: "Caribbean Cross Currents." Apply to: Race Relations C'ttee of the Sof, Friends House, Euston Road, N.W.1.

23 August, Sunday

LONDON W.1. 3-4.30 p.m. Outside American Embassy, Grosvenor Sq. Poster picket. London C'ttee of 100.

24 August, Monday

26 August, Wednesday

27 August, Thursday

GODSTONE, Surrey. Youth Forum: "Educa-

LONDON W.1. 3-4.30 p.m. Outside American

PLEASE SEND ME TRIBUNE

OXFORD. 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Carfax. Peace

LONDON W.C.1. 7.30 p.m. 6 Endsleigh St. London C'ttee of 100 working group mtg.

LONDON W.1. 5.30-7 p.m. Outside American Embassy, Grosvenor Sq. Poster picket. London C'ttee of 100.

LONDON E.11. 8 p.m. Friends Mtg House, Bush Road. Discussion on Nelson Mandela statement. PPU.

5-6 September, Sat-Sun

tion in a peaceful society." Food and accommodation provided. 35s (students £1). Write to 39 Falconwood Road, Addington, Croydon. Caterham 44950. CND.

PATHOGENESIS OF WAR 5s 6d (3d)

WAR WITHIN MAN 3s 0d (4d) A psychological inquiry into the roots of destructiveness by Erich

Report of the Third Conference of the Medical Association for Prevention of War. 64 pages.

BALANCE OF RISKS 1s 0d (3d)

CND's latest. Tercnce Heelas

CAN CHRISTIANS ACCEPT THE NUCLEAR DETERRENT? 6d (3d)

Christian CND: Diana Collins

SIR ALEC DOUGLAS-HOME 5s 0d (6d) Emrys Hughes' biographical broadside

NELSON MANDELA v. THE STATE 2s 6d (3d)

Some trial speeches

THE OXFAM STORY 2s 6d (3d)

Its history and work

Please add postage as in brackets

For all current books and literature

HOUSMANS

5 Caledonian Rd, Kings Cross, London N.1

CIVILIAN DEFENCE

a Peace News pamphlet

Price 2s 6d. Obtainable from W. H. Smith's bookstalls, or (3d postage extra) from Peace News. Reduced rates for quantity orders.

contributions by Adam Roberts. Jerome Frank, Arne Naess, Gene Sharp

foreword by Alastair Buchan. Director of the Institute for Strategic Studies

Tribune

is always fighting for Socialist policies to end nuclear madness. Sixteen pages of politics, poetry and reviews giving a left slant to the international fight for peace and freedom.

> every Friday from all news agents 1s or take advantage of this special offer

222 Strand, London W.C.2. 8 weeks for 6s (post free) or $1 US

ANGLO-FRENCH PEACEWORK

This project is now active and has scored much success by mixing constructive work with campaigning for disarmament and non-violence as described opposite.

We need money to feed the ravenous team and to help pay for the transport of those without money to France for the second half of this work for international co-operation.

Please write to Peace Action Centre. Carriage Drive, Frodsham, Cheshire, and assist this experiment in doing constructive work and radical peacemaking.

In the autumn of 1962 Denise and Harry Pyle, Quakers and active supporters of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, decided to turn their home at Frodsham, near the south bank of the Mersey estuary, into a centre for non-violence - for study and action. Barnaby Martin is at present full-time organiser for the centre - known as the Borrowdale Peace Action Centre. The centre is devoted to assisting peace work of many types in the Cheshire and Lancashire areas.

Barnaby Martin has been helping to organise the current Anglo-French project, which includes work camps and discussion conferences in this country and France and which will culminate with a demonstration outside the NATO headquarters in Paris.

The British work camp has been taking place at Frodsham over the past few weeks. The first week involved constructive work for old people, children, and for the community as a whole. Gardens were dug, playgrounds cleared and overgrown pathways opened up. When very heavy rainstorms hit Frodsham on July 18 and one of the main streets became a torrent of water the team gave emergency help to the local people in coping with the flood and its aftermath.

Barnaby Martin writes here about the attitudes of the British team members of the Anglo-French project to constructive voluntary work and its relevance to campaigning for a peaceful, non-violent society.

In our team there are various points of money for themselves and their families position does not exist in military judg- Of course it is not rich people that this on the community. I will try to present the law will punish us when we err. the ideas that are held in common by Work will have to be done because the British members of the team.

and our practice of voluntary work has healthy life. an application in every community in In trying to move the present society in us, or, better still, about others. treme poverty.

it is applied to those who are most in need. We can find greater needs in Tanganyika which is being aided by Frodsham War on Want.

However, there are other qualities which make up an effective programme of peace. There is already an International heard of the idea of voluntary work. the follow-up work will be done effect- yika. This was a tremendous success. nature. Slowly we can move towards a ively, since the Peace Action Centre We haven't changed society but we have system where work is done because it will remain after the team has left.

a complete change is possible) is ways. Sometimes it has been through the people of Frodsham who will do the variously called anarchist, non-violent, the lending of tools, sometimes a greater work, especially if the new voluntary voluntary, free, community. Its essen- gift - their interest. Because we have work group is a success. tial features are that it will not involve helped, they have become interested in The commercial society in which we live people perceive a need, or because it is We each of us seek to change society enjoyable. So firstly we need to encourtowards a basis which is less dependent age people to work in response to their him money. But in fact he comes to can wonder why those that are poorer on the earnings system. Some of us social consciences as some work is done realise that our work has no meaning in believe that it is possible to replace the now - not for selfish reasons. Secondly, commercial terms. The relationship earnings system completely. All of us we shall have to show people that work, which we have proposed by our volun-feel that our opposition to this system in a wide sense, is a necessity for a tary work affects him. He is now in-the world, not just where there is ex- the desired direction we seek ways of If our ideas affect him, he will be infinding springs of voluntary action. After clined to consider as his responsibility One quality of constructive work is that the recent floods, we know that we have some of the needs of poorer members found one. We helped the people in of society. This is our victory; in the Frodsham in a spectacular way. They same way as the militarist is forced to Liverpool than Frodsham, and yet did not respond with the commercial think of people as real people, not as greater needs in Litowa, a village in reaction which is the foundation of our opponents, and is forced to respond to his economic system, but they responded conscience more than his orders, or the voluntarily and generously. Instead of desire for a military victory. Indeed, we considering how much money they had have made a genuine military victory saved on the rates, they considered our impossible. voluntary work and propaganda for needs, provided drink, gave food, even It is true that in helping the poorest gave money to buy food. The pubs gave people we have done good. Nobody Voluntary Service organisation in Liver- also, but not to us. Theirs was a finer would deny that. But it is still valuable pool with more volunteers than can be action. In recognition of the voluntary to assist those who could even pay for organised, but Frodsham has hardly attitude which we had practised, they the work we do. Then we do not only collected money not for us, but for give service, but an education in the Also in Frodsham we can be certain that those who have greater need in Tangan-generous and social aspects of human created a firm new influence here.

Anglo-French group's constructive work for peace at Frodsham view on the impact of voluntary work or that we behave morally only because ment. It is a different approach to work camp has helped, but there is no relationships between people. So also in barrier in our minds for doing voluntary work. For a while, a man who has work for the rich. They may be richer money may think that our voluntary than ourselves, and this is the source of work is good for him because it saves a useful lesson for them, because they clined to think in generous terms about is needed. Next time there is snow on The sort of society that we wish to During our other work we have brought the ground or a flood in Church Street, move towards (not all of us believe that out the same response, but in smaller or a footpath overgrown, it should be than themselves give voluntary service. In time, such people may come to consider the starving millions as their responsibility and give more than they ever received in service.

The town council is an organisation intimately bound up with the earnings system. It makes decisions on the work that should be done, then offers money to anyone who will do it for them. Those who are unemployed and need money must accept this bribe in order to live satisfactorily. (This is the same situation as in all commercial organisations.) We feel that most, if not all, of the functions of a town council in such a place as Frodsham (pop. 6,000) can be done through a voluntary system, where the council members discover what work is needed, then do it. Large items of work will need organisation by voluntary work groups.

For these reasons we are not much interested in councils other than for the functions which ultimately they should have. We have used the council for information on old people's needs and where to borrow tools, but we are not keen to accept their money, nor involve ourselves in their decision-making

Up to now, I have described the value

Frodsham War on Want.

will remain after the team has left.

move towards (not all of us believe that out the same response, but in smaller or a footpath overgrown, it should be a complete change is possible) is ways. Sometimes it has been through the people of Frodsham who will do the variously called anarchist, non-violent, the lending of tools, sometimes a greater work, especially if the new voluntary voluntary, free, community. Its essen- gift - their interest. Because we have tial features are that it will not involve helped, they have become interested in authority nor will provision for the needs our ideas. Some ask what we get for doof a man be dependent on what he has ing this work. They have not yet escaped given. Neither bargaining nor an earn-from an entirely commercial attitude. ings system is sought.

social responses, rather than forcing ent thoughts. For example, the only them to act through selfish motives. We meaning of non-violence in military shall have to end the system whereby terms is surrender. In time the milivoluntarily and generously. Instead of desire for a military victory, indeed, we tions.) We feel that most, if not all, of make up an effective programme of saved on the rates, they considered our impossible. voluntary work and propaganda for needs, provided drink, gave food, even It is true that in helping the poorest be done through a voluntary system, peace. There is already an International gave money to buy food. The pubs gave people we have done good. Nobody Voluntary Service organisation in Liver also, but not to us. Theirs was a finer would deny that. But it is still valuable pool with more volunteers than can be action. In recognition of the voluntary to assist those who could even pay for organised, but Frodsham has hardly attitude which we had practised, they the work we do. Then we do not only heard of the idea of voluntary work. collected money not for us, but for give service, but an education in the Also in Frodsham we can be certain that those who have greater need in Tangan-generous and social aspects of human the follow-up work will be done effect- yika. This was a tremendous success. nature. Slowly we can move towards a ively, since the Peace Action Centre We haven't changed society but we have system where work is done because it created a firm new influence here.

work is done only because people seek tarist may realise that our non-violent

However, there are other qualities which considering how much money they had have made a genuine military victory the functions of a town council in such

is needed. Next time there is snow on The sort of society that we wish to During our other work we have brought the ground or a flood in Church Street, work group is a success.

The commercial society in which we live is poor in social feeling, especially among the rich. They are only rich because they have failed to give their We are not providing cheap labour, be- excess to those who need it. We might Another way of saying this is that it cause the effect of our work must not try to take it from them by force, or will be necessary in such a society to be judged in commercial terms. What use the force of government, through draw people into action through their we have done gives rise to quite differ- taxes, to adjust the situation a little. We prefer the non-violent way, where we actually start giving to the rich people, hoping to open their eyes to a better way of living.

a place as Frodsham (pop. 6,000) can where the council members discover what work is needed, then do it. Large items of work will need organisation by voluntary work groups.

For these reasons we are not much interested in councils other than for the functions which ultimately they should have. We have used the council for information on old people's needs and where to borrow tools, but we are not keen to accept their money, nor involve ourselves in their decision-making

Up to now, I have described the value of voluntary work for its own sake. But it has a value for peacemaking too. Firstly, I have already shown the similarity between non-violent resistance and voluntary action to undermine the earnings system. Naturally we can take the idea of drawing generous responses from people into the field of international relations. How can we best draw considerate feelings from Soviet or American people? Perhaps the best way is to conduct this sort of work camp in the USSR or USA and have people here from those regions to do voluntary work. The spirit of giving is the most powerful force to undermine fear and hate. There is much more to be done between people from different regions of the world. Work camps without any political aspect may be quite wasted.

In practical terms people in Frodsham know that it was pacifists and ban-thebombers who cleared Church Street on flood Saturday. They have been prepared to open their ears to our fearful ideas. I know some that are still too afraid to speak freely with us, though they would like to. Our activity has shown us how frightened people normally are of even speaking with a "banthe-bomber."

The CND badge in Frodsham has taken on a new meaning; one that people here are grateful for. Even if they don't see the connection between voluntary work and pacifism, Frodsham people have at least listened to the ideas of pacifists because they have done constructive work.

French group says: 'why we came'

Joseph Pyronnet, one of the organisers in which everyone shares the responsi- cheap labour and allow the government of the French Action Civique Non- bilities. It is hard to be self-disciplined or even charities to save money through Violente, and eleven other French volun- and to trust that others will be too, but our work. We don't want to compete teers who have been working at this is a necessary foundation for peace. with ordinary labour by taking their Frodsham have made the following Team work is a good schooling for self-jobs. comments as to why they have come to discipline. England, and about their peace work in Most people think that the purpose of ten British volunteers, helping a family

We have come to England to know what British people think of non-violence, of peace action and to know how British pacifists work; to have discussions to lay the basis for international cooperation for peace. In big international meetings, it is hard for pacifists to get to know one another personally. It is much easier when we live together. That is why we wanted to form an international team of volunteers for a month of work

In trying to work for peace in France we feel we must first experiment with the organisation and practice of team work. It is wrong to obey orders blindly, without thinking; it is equally wrong to give orders without sharing decisionmaking with others, and it is wrong to forget that one is part of a team and act separately, without involving others.

and criticise a society which is based on punishments and threats. It is easy to oppose the government or protest against organise a coherent and lasting project work is to earn money. Everybody wants less work and more money. This is one of the causes of violence. We help the poor and the victims of social segregation or the struggle for money. about various methods of work for peace; We show that work is primarily a service and not a means of acquiring money for oneself. This is an important part windows, floors, etc. of working for peace.

help. We don't like to be regarded as teams.

We shall be in France in August, with which lives in a two-roomed house. Parents and eleven children live in this small house. The father was a labourer, but is now ill and poor, and desperate. He has built the outside walls and roof, but we will continue his work by constructing internal walls, ceilings, doors,

At the same time, another team will be In France, when we organise a work working in a neighbouring town on the camp, we like to work for those who excavation of an old church. In response really need help. We do jobs that would to this work, the town council is pronever be done without our voluntary viding food and accommodation for both

PRISONERS EX-PRISONERS HUMAN BEINGS?

After being in prison for Committee of 100 activities it is hard enough to retain your sanity and start becoming a human being again - let alone worrying about your accumulated bills and where to get the next meal. Our "long-term" prisoners will be out soon. Pat Arrowsmith and Brian McGee are due out in October. It is easy to refuse military discipline Terry Chandler, veteran of the 1963 Greek demonstrations, was released on Monday - he needs immediate aid. Others already released also require assistance. W gradanio nella viota elodw edit. It to tuo medi alta ot Please help us to alleviate their financial problems.

a military base, but it is difficult to WELFARE GROUP (COMMITTEE OF 100) GROUND FLOOR, 88 PARK AVENUE, ENFIELD, MIDDLESEX

VIETNAM from front page

of Vietnam as soon as an orderly troop removal can be managed and appropriate safeguards arranged (perhaps by way of evacuation and generous resettlement at American expense) for those against whom the Viet Cong, when they eventually come to power, might take reprisals. In much of South East Asia, the tide of history is currently against the West and it is not force of arms, but only the long-range influence of economic aid and technical assistance that can regain for Western society the goodwill of a people it has for so long dominated and exploited.

As for the crisis itself, nothing is more difficult to pin down than military events at sea, the more so where one has only official bulletins to rely upon; but even if the Tonkin Gulf incident took place as first reported - suddenly and without immediate reason - all the rest of the crisis was an exquisite display of calculated diplomatic manipulation on the part of the Johnson administration. in all the ingenious paraphernalia of a authority from Congress. Only two first-class war scare: the hurried gather- Senators, Gruening of Alaska and the Council, the hush-hush conference with bi-partisan Congressional leadership, the late-night Presidential statement to the public, the sudden large-scale troop movements, the Presidential appeal to Congress for emergency, executive authority.

To all these cues, the mass media responded like a well-trained animal: saturation radio-television coverage of every official nuance and gesture, black banner headlines hinting of disaster, a continuous stream of bulletins and late reports over the air. Within several hours the foolishly botched efforts of a few out-dated torpedo-boats to molest the Seventh Fleet had been worked up into a new cold war Armageddon. Everything the "free world" stands for was suddenly in jeopardy. The usual allusions to Munich began to accumulate. Even sinking the offending torpedo boats was not a sufficient deterrent to appeasement: something more would have to be done, of course. By the weekend, The event was immediately caught up President Johnson had his emergency to preserve their independence of mind the Hanoi regime and the National and oppose the emergency act.

The convenient thing about crises is that they need have no objective correlative. Any event can become anything official circles care to make of it. If political leaders say everything is at stake, then, automatically, everything is at stake and no course of action is too

As so often in the past, one can be more impressed by the sheer fact of crisis, by the smoothly efficient dynamics of emergency-making as practised by the modern state, than by the specific content of the crisis. For it may ultimately be the capacity of our nation-states to generate crises rather than any political issues the crises are related to that will do

On the face of it, there seems no reason for Washington to take greater offence at this attack than at the markedly more destructive attacks Viet Cong forces have carried out against US helicopters and their American crews. After all, in the Tonkin Gulf incident, American forces suffered no damage at all. They defended their honour with despatch and complete success - which would seem a sufficient response.

Nor can a prima facie case be made that the torpedo boat attack is a radical new departure, clearly the opening of a new stage in the hostilities in SE Asia. The United States and the North Vietnamese are the allies of different sides in a bitter civil war; they have clashed in one way or another, with many weapons in many places. The presence of American warships within 30 miles of the North Vietnamese coast makes for a touchy situation; clearly that is why the American ships were warships - prepared to do battle - rather than coast guard patrol boats.

What then explains the Johnson administration's dramatic reaction to the incident?

Conceivably the American bombings are to serve as the first step towards expanding the war to North Vietnam. Rumours of such a move have been in the wind for months. It is difficult to see, however, whose interest would be served by Asian policy will shrivel to nothing. In such an extension of the conflict, besides all this grim and cynical business which chance at hand to negotiate itself out ing of the super-secret National Security ever-troublesome Wayne Morse, managed heavy casualties of a new war. As for Liberation Front it supports: the present guerilla war is running greatly in their favour. From their viewpoint, there would seem to be little purpose in enlarging the conflict.

> Of course not all politicians are wholly rational and no crisis is completely manageable. Any heated international confrontation can explode despite the plans and intentions of the participants. That is why it is nothing but hideously irresponsible for any government to create or seek to exploit such emergencies for any reason. The massing of armies at the border between North and South Vietnam (especially given the announced designs of General Khanh to extend the war) is exactly the sort of combustible situation enlightened diplomacy seeks to avoid.

> But barring the calamity of a new Korea-type war, the Tonkin Gulf incident will probably stand as the shrewdest manoeuvre of the 1964 American Presidential campaign. There are two issues which Barry Goldwater has sought to exploit in his quest for the presidency. One is the racial issue. the other Vietnam. Over the last several weeks Lyndon Johnson has clearly taken a beating on the racial issue. The New York and New Jersey race riots have driven the votes of many frightened whites to Barry Goldwater, who, it is wishfully assumed, will somehow put a stop to the racial revolution in America.

> The bombing of North Vietnam not only distract public attention from the racial problem, where it has been strongly fixed for many weeks, but it makes it impossible for Goldwater to claim that President Johnson is not acting with decision in South East Asia. The action forces Goldwater to drop Vietnam as an issue or to take the fatal step of advocating an even more belligerent course. And nobody gets elected President by calling for war.

Doubtless, in the wake of the crisis, the President's popularity will climb several points in the public opinion polls and the critical discussion of America's SE

JOHN BALL'S COLUMN of lilw of mid boths as the lily of mid boths as the lily of the lily o

More vagueness

to consist largely of euphemism, price 3s, stilling entings a about evaluation-begging and sheer cloudy vagueness. Defenceless villages are bombarded from the air, the inhabitants driven out into the countryside, the cattle machine-gunned, the huts set on fire with incendiary bullets: this is called pacification."

George Orwell wrote that over 15 years ago, and it is still true. President Johnson's television statement about Vietnam on August 5, for example, included the following passage:

"In the larger sense, this new act of aggression, aimed directly at our own forces, again brings home to all of us in the United States the importance of the struggle for peace and security school swot. And computers are no than of General Khanh. Just as the has seen the life of distinct one in South-East Asia. Aggression by more popular than school swots are, and Korean war made Syngman Rhee indis.

In our time, political speech and ing issue, which contains the second part writing are largely the defence of the of Dave Dellinger's report on a recent indefensible ... political language has visit to Cuba. On sale at Housmans,

> On the whole computers get a pretty bad press. People who earn their livings by writing and saying how awful everything is, and how it is all going to get much worse, always like to depict the computer as the big villain that will be running everything with relentless and inhuman efficiency in the year 2000.

> People mistrust computers because they are so efficient, because they work so fast and because they are so accurate. They do things we can't do, or if we could would take us much longer. In fact they remind us irresistibly of the

to consist largely of euphemism, question-begging and sheer cloudy vagueness. Defenceless villages are bombarded from the air, the inhabitants driven out into the countryside, the cattle machine-gunned, the huts set on fire with incendiary bullets: this is called pacification."

George Orwell wrote that over 15 years ago, and it is still true. President Johnson's television statement about Vietnam on August 5, for example, included the following passage: "In the larger sense, this new act of aggression, aimed directly at our own forces, again brings home to all of us in the United States the importance of the struggle for peace and security in South-East Asia. Aggression by terror against the peaceful villages of South Vietnam has now been joined by open aggression on the high seas against the United States of America. The determination of all Americans to carry out our full commitment to the people and Government of South Vietnam will be redoubled by this out-

In this passage, as well as entirely random clichés (e.g. "in the larger sense,") President Johnson has slipped into vagueness at exactly those points where he would otherwise have had to say what his policy involved: his phrase, "our full commitment," conceals napalm bombing, shelling of villages, destruction of crops, herding people into strategic hamlets, and propping up a government which has virtually no popular support. As cleared Chusch Street rage."

An even worse example, I think, is that of Judge Ross W. Harper of the US District Court in St Louis, who on July 6 sentenced a conscientious objector, Russ Goddard, to five years' imprisonment for refusing to report for call-up. Before passing sentence, the judge said:
"I am glad I live in a country where anyone can take the position you do. You enjoy your freedom here because of the blood, sweat, toil and tears given by millions."

To call a man "free" who you are just about to lock up for five years seems to me to be Grade A Newspeak; 1984's Ministry of Love could be proud of it. But Judge Harper really exists: George Orwell didn't have to invent him.

The only thing which disturbed Judge Harper's day was that two friends of Russ Goddard staged a sit-in in his office, demanding that he should be released or that they also be imprisoned. They each got six months for contempt of court - but not until the judge had tried to talk them out of it. The whole story is written up in the August 1964 issue of Liberation - an exceptionally interest- Miller.

On the whole computers get a pretty bad press. People who earn their livings by writing and saying how awful everything is, and how it is all going to get much worse, always like to depict the computer as the big villain that will be running everything with relentless and inhuman efficiency in the year 2000.

price 3s.

People mistrust computers because they are so efficient, because they work so fast and because they are so accurate. They do things we can't do, or if we could would take us much longer. In fact they remind us irresistibly of the school swot. And computers are no more popular than school swots are, and every time they get the right answer they become a bit more unpopular.

For me this view of computers was modified by Margaret Masterman's article in the August 6 Times Literary Supplement. "To some people," she says, "a digital computer is a mark of doom: a symbol of Man's increasing servitude to the machine. To others it is a gigantic multiple switch which, under favourable conditions, operates with the speed of light, but which only too often, e.g. when it gets too hot, will not operate at all." So they are not infallibly efficient after all.

Nor are they so coldly and mechanically inhuman as we might have thought. Margaret Masterman tells us that the Manchester University computer was programmed to write love letters. The following was a typical product:

DEAR HONEY-DEW YOU ARE MY GREATEST WHISKERS MY UTTER MOONBEAM YOURS BEAUTIFULLY MANCHESTER UNIVERSITY

COMPUTER which seems to me a real breakthrough in writing love letters. Another computer said STEAM IS SHINY and Miss Masterman quotes this bit of computer dialogue: WHY ARENT YOU DRESSED? I THOUGHT I WAS.

So perhaps government by computer may in the end be preferable to government by whatever it is we've got at the moment.

Incidentally the August 6 issue of The Times Literary Supplement in which Margaret Masterman's article appeared is an extraordinarily good ninepence worth. It is concerned with the avantgarde in literature, and as well as containing many examples of avant-garde writing has articles by, among others, Allen Ginsberg, W. S. Burroughs, John Arden, Maurice Girodias and Jonathan of American warships within 30 miles of the North Vietnamese coast makes for a touchy situation; clearly that is why the American ships were warships - prepared to do battle - rather than coast guard patrol boats.

88 5000TT (TUTTO 90 1/00 TV) talendaria

What then explains the Johnson administration's dramatic reaction to the incident?

Conceivably the American bombings are to serve as the first step towards expanding the war to North Vietnam. Rumours of such a move have been in the wind for months. It is difficult to see, however, whose interest would be served by such an extension of the conflict, besides position. War is the life's blood of regimes like these, and General Khanh has been quick, in the wake of the bombings, to grasp for the security of martial law in South Vietnam.

to gain by turning Vietnam into another communists and always turning the Korea. At present it is Senator Gold- other cheek." water who must struggle against the One wishes there had been a reporter charge of being a trigger-happy war- at hand impudent enough to ask the monger. The Democrats would scarcely Senator where he had picked up that want to lose that electoral advantage quaint and dimly familiar phrase about by assuming the responsibility for the the other cheek.

weapons in many places. The presence distract public attention from the racial problem, where it has been strongly fixed for many weeks, but it makes it impossible for Goldwater to claim that President Johnson is not acting with decision in South East Asia. The action forces Goldwater to drop Vietnam as an issue or to take the fatal step of advocating an even more belligerent course. And nobody gets elected President by calling for war.

Doubtless, in the wake of the crisis, the President's popularity will climb several points in the public opinion polls and the critical discussion of America's SE Asian policy will shrivel to nothing. In all this grim and cynical business which than of General Khanh. Just as the has seen the life of at least one Korean war made Syngman Rhee indis- American flier sacrificed to the politics pensable to the West, a big war in of a presidential election, it was of Vietnam could save the General's shaky course Senator Goldwater who inadvertently managed to strike the most sicklycomic note of the week. At the press conference in which he announced his support for President Johnson's action, Goldwater remarked, "I think America But the Johnson administration has little has been taking too much from the

Crisis flares in Downing St

TUESDAY AUGUST

The Coprus situation brought many visitors to 10. Downing Street sentential Among them was Mr. Wilson, who had injured his face while on holiday, and Mr. David Bruce (right), the American Ambassador. The Prime Minister had a bandaged finger when he came to the door to say goodbye.

A heroin fix (photo: John Hopkins)

Drug addicts who cure themselves

Theodore Roszak

s to the purpose of the control of the purpose of t the therapeutic community

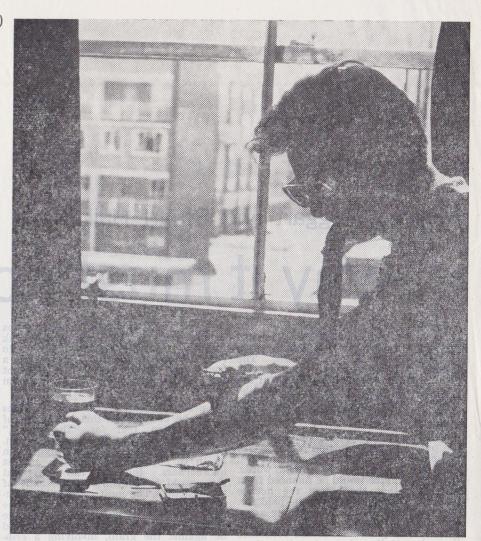

that Los Angeles is a city at all in any word "synanon" has been coined, that traditional sense of the word; perhaps the experiment as a whole derives its the area requires another designation name.) the area requires another designation entirely. This sprawling congeries of small towns, beach resorts, housing tracts, and newly spawned suburbs, ponderously stitched together by eight-lane freeways, lacks even the physical integrity of a metropolis. It is an assemblage of people, structures, and diffuse social relations without a cultural centre or political focus, the pattern of which has been dictated by the mechanical capacities of the automobile.

Secondly, the discontinuous relationship of AA members had to be replaced by a permanent living situation, in which recuperating addicts would remain in constant interaction, relying upon one another's guidance.

Currently, there are 450 former addicts and alcoholics involved in Synanon. They maintain several houses, each under the direction of a staff drawn than the constant interaction, relying upon one another's guidance. capacities of the automobile.

There is perhaps no modern city where ber's self-image, then trying to build up the sense of community is so dissipated a more realistic sense of personal value. as in Los Angeles. Indeed, it is doubtful (It is from these sessions, for which the

from Synanon nationts. The former

No member is permitted to coerce another for any reason, either by browbeating, or emotional cruelty, or physical force. The door of the house is always open for those who wish to enter. No one is constrained to stay. No one is forced to do anything. The household maintains all its members (provided they stay off narcotics) whether they are co-operative or stubwhether they are co-operative or stub-born, helpful or obstructive, personable or obnoxious. Voluntarism is the single binding force within the community. At the same time, the daily regimen within each house is quite demanding is the basic commitment of all residents. It is a kind of miniature town meeting up. So they are treated like stubborn children: closely supervised in their habits, bossed around, bullied a little. Addicts, so I am told, tend to be negligent and anti-social in the extreme. They will leave light bulbs burning and

There is perhaps no modern city where ber's self-image, then trying to build up is the basic commitment of all residents. It is a kind of miniature town meeting that Los Angeles is a city at all in any word "synanon" has been coined, that traditional sense of the word; perhaps the experiment as a whole derives its cal force. The door of the house is the area requires another designation name.) entirely. This sprawling congeries of small towns, beach resorts, housing of AA members had to be replaced by a tracts, and newly spawned suburbs, ponderously stitched together by eight-lane recuperating addicts would remain in freeways, lacks even the physical in- constant interaction, relying upon one tegrity of a metropolis. It is an assemb- another's guidance. lage of people, structures, and diffuse social relations without a cultural centre or political focus, the pattern of which They maintain several houses, each has been dictated by the mechanical capacities of the automobile.

be car-borne, commuting over distances of 50 or 60 miles from home to place of Santa Monica in July (it is the largest work to beach to movie theatre to amusement park. Southern Californians spend more time driving past one withdrawal without drugs could be reanother than living together. Inhabitants quired as a matter of course. Wasn't it of the several San Fernando Valley sub- an agonising process? I was told that urbs think nothing of driving 90 minutes withdrawal pains are often greatly exagto offices in the inner city, leaving behind gerated by addicts, mainly because the them a housing development whose situation in which withdrawal is usually population has no participant relation- required in prisons or public hospitals ship to the life of Los Angeles beyond its - is unpleasant and impersonal in the dependence upon a distant business for extreme. The environment presents no a salary that will be spent in local shopping centres, drive-ins, and bowling alleys.

duct of astronomically rapid and un- which wants him and needs him. He planned growth, is a case study in social lives in the daily presence of people, disintegration it is very nearly a Weberian ideal-type. And as such, it may prefigure the pattern of the mushrooming metropoli of Africa, Asia and Latin America, just as it illustrates à outrance the social ills that now afflict the world's older cities.

It is particularly appropriate that a social experiment like Synanon should make its appearance in Los Angeles, grown so hopelessly slack. And, fittingly enough, in this least coherent of cities, it is among the most dislocated of people that the experiment has taken root.

Six years ago, in 1958, Chuck Diederich, himself a former alcoholic, began to apply the therapeutic techniques of Alcoholics Anonymous to narcotics adthe addictive personality requires a psychic defences, first destroying what capacities of its members.

the sense of community is so dissipated a more realistic sense of personal value. as in Los Angeles. Indeed, it is doubtful (It is from these sessions, for which the

Secondly, the discontinuous relationship permanent living situation, in which Currently, there are 450 former addicts and alcoholics involved in Synanon. under the direction of a staff drawn from Synanon patients. The former At any one moment of the day, a major addicts have gone off narcotics "cold portion of the city's population is apt to turkey" - that is, without the use of drugs. When I visited Synanon house in of the Synanon establishments, holding 190 people) I was surprised to learn that positive incentives for quitting narcotics. But at Synanon, intense personal relations surround the addict. He is intro-In reality, Los Angeles, the chaotic pro- duced to a community of fellow sufferers disorganisation. As an example of urban who by forsaking narcotics, have become happy, productive, and mature human beings. He has every good reason to give up addiction, and he enjoys the example and guidance - usually a stern, parental guidance - of those who have shared his troubled experience.

It is not my purpose here to investigate in any detail the history and therapy of Synanon. Indeed, the therapeutic methods of Synanon are still so pragmatic Moreover, "autocrats" are easily and frewhere the bonds of community life have in character - so much the rules of thumb roughly worked out by addicts themselves - that their full theoretical implications have yet to be developed. (The most thorough study at present available is Daniel Casriel's So Fair a House, Prentice-Hall, 1963.) It is rather the politics of Synanon that interests me. For the therapeutic community we dicts. Very soon it became clear that have here is an outstanding example of the relevance of anarchist social theory more comprehensive approach and more to one of the most baffling dilemmas of intense therapy than AA has developed. contemporary society. And what is most Under Diederich's direction, the weekly remarkable: none of the organisers or testimonials of AA were intensified into directors of Synanon - as far as I am 90-minute nightly group therapy sessions aware - is a student of anarchism. The in which eight or ten former addicts community has arisen spontaneously and mercilessly assailed one another's pragmatically out of the needs and

No member is permitted to coerce where the distorted and oppressive another for any reason, either by browbeating, or emotional cruelty, or physialways open for those who wish to The "autocratic" aspect of the com-leave as much as for those who wish munity - that is, the strictness of disleave as much as for those who wish to enter. No one is constrained to stay. No one is forced to do anything. The household maintains all its members (provided they stay off narcotics) whether they are co-operative or stubborn, helpful or obstructive, personable or obnoxious. Voluntarism is the single binding force within the community.

At the same time, the daily regimen within each house is quite demanding, especially for the newcomers, who, as part of their therapy, are assigned to the dirtiest work. The Santa Monica house is a very large building with lots of floors and corners and furniture to keep neat, lots of cooking to get done. lots of groceries to get bought, lots of dishes to get washed. How does the work get done without compulsion? The At the same time, Synanon's naughty its control over each house as an "autocracy": discipline is strictly laid down by those in charge with the full expectation that orders will be carried out.

But the "autocracy" at Synanon is of a peculiar kind. For one thing, the "autocrats," who always enter the community from the bottom and work up, and their subjects are intimate friends, people who know one another as only the members of group therapy sessions can. Whatever animosity might arise between them comes out in the sessions, as a matter of course, and is subject to the group's evaluation. Is anyone being tyrannised or exploited? Are the grudges that arise between members legitimate or unreasonable? The intensively candid scrutiny of the synanon is bound to tell.

quently replaced. Staff members, since they are further along in their therapy, are expected to "graduate" fairly soon - that is, to leave the community and join the world outside. Thus, no one can entrench himself in a position of responsibility.

Finally, staff members exist only to perform and delegate necessary functions. Discipline is not multiplied beyond necessity. Any one attempting to hold down a position for no better reason than self-gratification is bound to come under the powerful criticism of his synanon, where the false self-image this position supports, like all the other false images he has hidden behind, will be shattered. The synanon, besides being a therapeutic device, has an essential they knew to be phoney in each mem. Within each Synanon house, non-violence political function within the community. continued on page 8 ambitions of staff members - if they exist - can quickly be exposed and treated as the disease they are.

cipline - is felt most strongly at the very outset of therapy. It is a basic assumption at Synanon that addicts are. emotionally, children who refuse to grow up. So they are treated like stubborn children: closely supervised in their habits, bossed around, bullied a little. Addicts, so I am told, tend to be negligent and anti-social in the extreme. They will leave light bulbs burning and appliances turned on and unattended. drop their clothes on the floor at night, leave their beds unmade, and generally make a mess of themselves and their environment. The community keeps after them constantly. Until they learn better, they will be called down, bawled out, and made to mind.

staff at Synanon is very quick to describe children are free to leave whenever they find the treatment they receive too severe. And since the community exists to keep and cure them, its members are careful to temper the discipline of neophytes with TLC ("tender, loving They must be bossed, but lovingly. At this point, then, the authority the community assumes over its newcomers is essentially parental and has, for its strictness, the same functional justification the mature have for taking in hand those who don't know any better.

> Once, however, Synanon's therapy has matured the newcomer, he comes to see the reasonableness of the demands made of him. The community matters to him; it is his hope of cure; he strongly wants it to survive for himself and for the others he is bound to. And so he performs the tasks survival requires. Scrubbing floors and cleaning toilets are not pleasant work. But the dirty jobs have to be done; they were once done even by those who give the orders now. And one does the chores voluntarily and with good spirit where the wellbeing of the community depends upon the effort.

> By all appearances, Synanon is well on its way to becoming one of the most successful of communitarian experiments. Its members are suffused with a sense of confidence and growth. In Nevada, the state government has helped Synanon to open up a special programme in the prison at Reno, dealing not with addicts but with habitual criminals. Synanon's experiment in penology has yielded notable successes -

Richard Hoggart and Stuart Hall

why it must not be commercial

The case against putting local radio into commercial hands is clear-cut. The surprising thing is that it should have to be argued again from scratch. The Pilkington Report pointed to the effects of divided lovalties on the quality of the service provided by commercial television. Many apologia have been offered since, but the main arguments still stand.

At present an appeal is being made to the public on the question of costs. Yet the claim that commercial radio would be "free" is just a play with words. True, the service would be financed from revenue rather than from the licence fee. But advertising has to be paid for. Some advertising - by stimulating sales, and hence production - pays for itself. But some is passed on to the consumer But some is passed on to the consumer through retail prices, keeping them slightly higher than they would otherwise be. In some cases, the consumer does pay. It may be that a service which we pay for directly, by licence, seems to cost us something, whereas one which we pay for indirectly seems to be free. But this is an illusion which tells us something about the state of our social thinking, and little about economic reality. Against this, the BBC reckons to be able to establish a nation-wide system of local stations at a cost of not much more than 5s extra per licence (about 4d per head per week). The costs are in any case so marginal that the decision, for or against a commercial system, can't be taken on these grounds for the highest figures, and keep them best structure for doing so?

In practice, commercial local stations would be better than this. Pressure of local opinion, fear for "the image," wards centralisation. In spite of the would force the hand of the local station. Some bold station managers might even go in to bat for the audience against this would be contrary to the logic of the system? The most responsible manager would have to walk the tight-rope between divided lovalties to audience at a the principle has been impossible, technically, to apply in radio and television. Local sound broadcast-ing is the chance. The possible range of people and groups involved, the diversity of types of exchange and provincial centres. Voices, accents, the station managers were bold enough to go after the issues where controversy ager would have to walk the tight-rope concentrated into one centre, one tone:

This has become part of one to reverse the trend to-possible, technically, to apply in radio and television. Local sound broadcast-ing is the chance. The possible range of people and groups involved, the diversity of types of exchange and provincial centres. Voices, accents, the station managers were bold enough the metropolitan. This has become part of oniting the principle has been impossible, technically, to apply in radio and television. Local sound broadcast-ing is the chance. The possible range of people and groups involved, the diversity of types of exchange and provincial centres. Voices, accents, the metropolitan possible, technically, to apply in radio and television. Local sound broadcast-ing is the chance. The possible range of people and groups involved, the diversity of types of exchange and provincial centres. Voices, accents, the metropolitan possible, technically, to apply in radio and television. Local sound broadcast-ing is the chance. The possible range of people and groups involved, the diversity of types of exchange of people and groups involved, the diversity of types of exchange of people and groups involved, the diversity of types of exchange of people and groups in between divided loyalties - to audience the metropolitan. This has become part of opinions between all-too-familiar and to board. Every departure would of the general drift to the South - an be against the grain, involving a crippling kind of bargaining (both across the are now culturally neglected areas to table and in the heart). Why deliber match the economically deprived ones. ately build one kind of system, and then This process has not been altogether a graft conflicting needs on to it? It seems much more sensible to define are now beginning to be felt in all kinds what kind of service we want, and then of ways. The first brief, therefore, is to try for the structure which, typically, that local networks should serve, nourish serves those ends.

Why, then, is it so difficult to get this argument going on the right lines? Partly because of the many kinds of real argument going on the right lines? Partly because of the many kinds of commercial interests which have suddenly discovered their vocation in the championing of the "local idea" in sound broadcasting. These are of two kinds. There are the vested interests the companies which produce equipment the companies which produce equipment the companies which produce equipment the climate of opinion within which decision face to the regions and provincial life is unlikely to present a programme based on Which); traffic and weather information; educational services at all levels, perhaps closely linked with WEA classes, or with the local art or pottery school, or the regional "Tec," or the university vant discussion and controversy which surrounds these issues, and which form the same reasons that ITV is unlikely to present a programme based on Which); traffic and weather information; educational services at all levels, perhaps closely linked with WEA classes, or with the local art or pottery school, or the regional "Tec," or the university vant discussion and controversy which the decisions made, and the relevant discussion and controversy which the decisions made, and the relevant discussion and controversy which the decisions made, and the reasons that ITV is unlikely to present a programme based on Which); traffic and weather information; educational services at all levels, or with the local art or pottery school, or the regional "Tec," or the university or with the local art or pottery school, or the regions and controversy which the decisions made, and the relevant discussion and controversy which the decisions are the vertical traffic and weather information. those seeking to tap lucrative local

We need local broadcasting now for a especially in primary and junior schools. In practice, commercial local stations number of crucial, but complex, reasons. But so far the principle has been imbad one - but it has its costs, and these and restore the individual character, the vigour and native strengths of each

ocaradio

lines is already under way in education, "experts" such as a national channel is under obvious pressure to provide.

Third, there would be the range of services. These would include several kinds of news; a diary of events (the garden fete at the church hall at one end, the agenda of the local council at the other); consumer and shopping advice (a service difficult for a station in fee to local advertisers to offer, for much the same reasons that ITV is the climate of opinion within which de- cussion face-to-face with tutors and through retail prices, keeping them slightly higher than they would otherwise be. In some cases, the consumer does pay. It may be that a service which we pay for directly, by licence, seems to cost us something, whereas one which we pay for indirectly seems to be free. But this is an illusion which tells us something about the state of our social thinking, and little about economic reality. Against this, the BBC reckons to be able to establish a nation-wide system of local stations at a cost of not much more than 5s extra per licence (about 4d per head per week). The costs are in any case so marginal that the decision, for or against a commercial system, can't be taken on these grounds

The real debate is about the nature of public service broadcasting and its relation to social needs. Once we begin to think of the kinds of service we want, we can see how absurd it would be to base it upon advertising revenue. A local commercial network would have of necessity to serve its commercial masters. The local station would have to devise programmes which drew and held the largest possible audience for as much broadcasting time as possible. It is not difficult to imagine what kinds of programmes these would be - Radio Caroline has already given us more than a hint. Pop music and light classics inevitably command a high audience rating, especially in the age of the car radio and the transistor. The quality of attention to background music is usually poor, but such programmes are sound-investment lowest-common-denominator programmes. The BBC itself intends to extend its service in this direction, now that the "needle time" problem is being solved. And it is certainly one of the kinds of broadcasting which is best provided on a national scale. But there is the strongest of Lloyd and others, either in the Cabinet arguments against pop music - or indeed or near the centres of power in the inevitably impersonal structures. They any one kind of programme - all the time.

In the "ideal" commercial case, discjockey programmes alone, with regular natural breaks," would keep the graphs consistently high, advertisers happy and the station prosperous. But programmes which catered for minority audiences even substantial minorities - or which deliberately broke the pattern in order

Richard Hoggart is Professor of English and Director of the Centre for Contemporary Cultural Studies at Birmingham University. He was a member of the Pilkington Committee on Broadcasting.

Stuart Hall is the Research Fellow at the Centre for Contemporary Cultural Studies, Birmingham University.

Statil, illy of villa a city to try for the structure which, typically, serves those ends.

Why, then, is it so difficult to get this argument going on the right lines? Partly because of the many kinds of commercial interests which have suddenly discovered their vocation in the championing of the "local idea" in sound broadcasting. These are of two kinds. There are the vested interests the companies which produce equipment, those seeking to tap lucrative local markets, those who want to sponsor local stations, and the "respectable" lobbies, like the National Broadcasting Development Council. Then there are the mavericks and the wide boys, free-booting entrepreneurs of the publicity and If the planning of resources is to another.

This is only half the story. For these interests now work upon a government. nervous about making the wrong kind of pre-election move, and apparently split down the middle on this question. Hence, on one side, the Postmaster-General's hesitancy when confronting the pirates - a delay which might well have the effect of ceding the whole case to Caroline by allowing them to estab- Second, the local service should attempt lish de facto possession of wavelengths to make the relationship between audithroughout the summer. On the other ence and media a more equal one. who nourish our culture nationally. In side, there are Iain Macleod, Selwyn National systems - or regional ones, recent years such people have come in Conservative Party, some of whom (as Macleod quite freely admitted in the of the character and history of each Spectator, May 29, 1964), helped to region (a different matter, incidentally, pioneer commercial television, and are from a contrived folksy "regional" bonnow "intent on doing them (the BBC) one more service." This group seems to be determined to use commercial radio as an issue of principle. As the Spectator's Political Correspondent observed (in the same issue quoted above), "The real prospects lie not in the radio lobby but in a shift in the climate of opinion in the Cabinet and the Com-. the search, among Tories, for policies which can display, without undue electoral disadvantage, the true Conservative virtues of free enterprise.'

pling kind of bargaining (both across the are now culturally neglected areas to table and in the heart). Why deliber- match the economically deprived ones. ately build one kind of system, and then This process has not been altogether a graft conflicting needs on to it? It bad one - but it has its costs, and these seems much more sensible to define are now beginning to be felt in all kinds what kind of service we want, and then of ways. The first brief, therefore, is that local networks should serve, nourish and restore the individual character, the vigour and native strengths of each

> This "denaturing" of provincial life is part of a larger problem: the loss to the regions and provincial centres of impact upon a whole range of issues; both the decisions made, and the relevant discussion and controversy which surrounds these issues, and which form the climate of opinion within which decisions are taken, have been increasingly centralised. This is why so many people feel their remoteness from the centres of power and influence, cut off from the democratic process.

agency game. The vested interest lob- be set within a human context, and bies we know of old - they are a version reflect the real needs which arise locally, of the pressure group which successfully then democracy needs to be quickened pioneered commercial television. The at the roots. Much of the recent litera-'pirates" are a manifestation of another ture in, for example, the field of urban kind of commercial spirit. We needn't renewal and town planning, points this look for any collusion between them - way. People will only feel their effectthe two tactics play neatly into one iveness in relation to such issues as urban renewal, the housing and property squeeze, transport or hospital or educational or welfare services, community amenities, if their voices can be heard. The local station, then, should act as a forum for the voices of its area - a forum as free from pressure of any kind, whether Establishment-paternal, commercial or local government, as can be devised.

whether of the BBC or ITA pattern - are cannot build upon an intimate knowledge from a contrived folksy "regional" bonhomie), because the regions are too large. They cannot provide a channel large. for smaller groups in the community because the audiences they serve are too diverse. But local radio, with its limited radius, is ideally suited for just such a purpose. These channels of communication should be more widely available for people to speak, as well as be spoken to.

As Miss Rachel Powell said recently in a contribution to the debate, "Anybody who, like myself, has taught English, will recognise that skill and confidence So, for the moment, the debate is both in expression grow directly in proportion And behind such names lies a wealth of Third, there would be the range of services. These would include several kinds of news; a diary of events (the garden fete at the church hall at one end, the agenda of the local council at the other); consumer and shopping advice (a service difficult for a station in fee to local advertisers to offer, for much the same reasons that ITV is unlikely to present a programme based on Which); traffic and weather information; educational services at all levels, perhaps closely linked with WEA classes, or with the local art or pottery school, or the regional "Tec," or the university (and giving, for the first time, a real opportunity for follow-up classes, discussion face-to-face with tutors and teachers). And reports and interviews with local people - either those responsible to the community in some way (the borough architect, the hospital matron, the youth leader or the school headmaster), or those involved with some new project which deserved to be more widely known about (a new type of health clinic or youth centre, an experimental programme in an open prison, a modification of the streaming system in a junior school).

Here the interplay between the local station and an educated and informed community audience would be possible for the first time - the scale is right at last, and the quality of life is there to be expressed. And the local station should seek to express this life as directly as possible, not to "package" issues and "present" people rigidly.

Fourth, there is the relationship between the studio and the creative life of the area. There are men and women playwrights, poets, novelists, journalists increasing numbers from regions and provincial centres outside the metropolitan hub - Nottingham or Bradford or Salford have contributed more (themes as well as writers) than London itself. Yet inevitably Delaney, Braine, Sillitoe, Storey, Waterhouse, Willis Hall, Stan Barstow and others get to be known nationally first, before - if ever - being known locally. They are "prophets, save in their own country": though their very capacities to sustain their art may well depend upon these local roots being maintained and deepened. Why not Roots from Radio Norfolk, or Taste Of Honey on Radio Salford, or a draft chapter from Sporting Life from Radio Halifax, or the adaptation of Long Distance Runner from a Nottingham youth club, first?

loaded and masked. Can those of us to the confidence that somebody is listen- talent in the creative arts - young a national audience but who may serve speaking to those who are likely to know a local one well; the amateur musical the terms and conditions of their work and dramatic groups; the "undiscovered" best; and those for whom the station pop groups in Liverpool, or the folk club would be an amateur dramatic and circuit in Birmingham or the jazz cellars musical centre in the best sense - the in Hull. In each case, the mixture of place where whatever was best in the kinds of radio should be different, a region could count on a hearing. real reflection of the character of the None of these kinds of service - there balance between well-known people who, and consistently offered within a com- But if the BBC is to "hold the ring," behalf of its station commanders to painters and poets who may never find made use of radio as a medium for area. In each case there would be a are many others - are likely to be widely government agency.

Pop singer Susan Maughan. Do we want the nonstop pop music of commercial radio or a mixture of programmes?

whether the BBC could or would be the best alternative.

The BBC pilot projects on local sound provided the Corporation with a good deal of first-hand evidence. They were often very lively - and miles ahead of the commercially planned programming. But doubts still remain (and the BBC itself should take them most seriously of all). These can be grouped under three headings. First, the fear that the local services will not be sufficiently distinct from the regional and national services. Second, there are doubts about the BBC's general tone in broadcasting - its paternalism, its enclosed highlyprofessionalised massiveness, its tendency to gravitate towards the orthodox and the official. Third, there is the fear that, under a BBC umbrella, local stations might be saved from commercial interests, only to find themselves in the hands of vested local interests - even those with the best of intentions, like the council, or representatives from worthy but probably not sufficiently flexible voluntary organisations.

There is something to each of these fears. In their recent statements, the BBC have gone a good way to satisfy doubts on the first count. The second and third counts are more difficult especially because there are very real questions about freedom and objectivity which have to be faced (by critics of the BBC, as well as by the Corporation itself). None of the arguments outweigh the obvious advantages of constituting a local broadcasting service under the auspices of the BBC. The provision of studios and standard equipment, and of trained technical and production men, had best come from one place. The BBC can ensure a high calibre, whereas the local stations might do badly if left to their own resources. (Even here, though, the BBC has something to watch become the fourth wheel to the existing out for - it must draw more widely from tricycle. outside the charmed Oxbridge circle for its personnel than it does at present.)

mercial structure. The question is then the key to the situation will be the degree of freedom allowed to the station manager and his team. These can't be "career men," who often (not always) regard a spell in the regions like an inevitable kind of temporary banishment. They will have to be men who believe in the local idea and mean to serve it. And they must be given the freedom to do so. They should be able to call on advice from every quarter, not simply rely upon advisory committees; and they mustn't be corralled from inside by a BBC "inner net." This freedom is the condition for their discovering what really makes their area tick, what is alive and what moves in it. Their brief should be to go out and draw that life into the studio. They will need to promote - rather than steer around - controversy. They must use the installations as a set of technical and production facilities for giving voice to the region: the station will be an open-ended

> This will mean that the station manager will have to know his area from the inside - for only in this way can he defend the difficult decisions which his ranging brief will inevitably lead him to make. He will have to run the gauntlet, from either end: local council and Portland Place. But the job will carry its own rewards. He will, of course, be subject to recall - this is the corollary of his freedom. But, within these limits, he will be what broadcasting now needs most (in an area where formal demo-cracy is technically impossible): the freest of public servants.

> What, then, would be the actual link between the station managers and Broadcasting House? The most obvious way would be to set up a new controllership, alongside the Home, Light and Third, to look after the local stations. The danger here is that local broadcasting would

It would be far better to constitute a national broadcasting unit, within the The more important argument is that BBC framework, but distinct from the some safeguards must be built in against existing pattern, which would act as a the mis-use of station freedom. In this servicing and stimulating centre for the respect, the experienced national author- 100 or so stations, but sufficiently indeity of the BBC is more likely to interpret pendent to develop its own tone. It "editorial objectivity" flexibly, than would co-ordinate and channel through other alternatives - a standing body of all the technical and servicing needs of the local council, for example, or a the local stations, but it would speak with strength and independence on a national audience but who may serve speaking to those who are likely to know a local one well; the amateur musical the terms and conditions of their work and dramatic groups; the "undiscovered" best; and those for whom the station pop groups in Liverpool, or the folk club would be an amateur dramatic and in Hull. In each case, the mixture of place where whatever was best in the kinds of radio should be different, a region could count on a hearing.

None of these kinds of service - there area. In each case there would be a are many others - are likely to be widely painters and poets who may never find made use of radio as a medium for circuit in Birmingham or the jazz cellars musical centre in the best sense - the out for - it must draw more widely from tricycle. outside the charmed Oxbridge circle for its personnel than it does at present.)

The more important argument is that some safeguards must be built in against the mis-use of station freedom. In this respect, the experienced national authority of the BBC is more likely to interpret "editorial objectivity" flexibly, than other alternatives - a standing body of the local council, for example, or a government agency.

had best come from one place. The would be to set up a new controllership, BBC can ensure a high calibre, whereas alongside the Home, Light and Third, to the local stations might do badly if left look after the local stations. The danger to their own resources. (Even here, here is that local broadcasting would though, the BBC has something to watch become the fourth wheel to the existing

> It would be far better to constitute a national broadcasting unit, within the BBC framework, but distinct from the existing pattern, which would act as a servicing and stimulating centre for the 100 or so stations, but sufficiently independent to develop its own tone. It would co-ordinate and channel through all the technical and servicing needs of the local stations, but it would speak with strength and independence on behalf of its station commanders to Portland Place: a kind of standing conference of local stations within the Corporation structure. The independence of this body would be best served if it were located physically in the regions in Birmingham, say, or Leeds.

> What we have attempted is, in part, a definition of the temper of local broadcasting: and temper is one of those indefinable qualities it is impossible to legislate for. But we can take certain steps in that direction. Certain structures favour one kind of tone - others run directly counter to it. We can make sure we get the appropriate framework. And then, institutions respond to and reflect changes in climate and mood, if these can be sufficiently sharply identi-

In some way, the BBC has already begun to respond. Its "declaration of freedom to reflect the full spread of opinion" at the time of Suez now seems, in retrospect, to have been something of a turning point. And since then there have been some breakthroughs in broadcasting which certainly provide a basis within Corporation traditions for a more flexible interpretation of its brief. There are wider needs, now, a more distinct trend in society towards the traditions of open debate, and young men and women with the temper to serve it well. It is in this context that the BBC, and those in the community now concerned to extend and deepen democratic ways of life, should begin to think and plan for local broadcasting.

"Prophets, save in their own country." Although their work is focused locally, artists like Alan Sillitoe become known nationally rather than locally. This is a scene from the film of Alan Sillitoe's Nottingham story, "Saturday Night and Sunday Morning," distributed by Bryanston, British Lion, through BLC.

Pop singer Susan Maughan. Do we want the nonstop pop music of commercial radio or a mixture of

The military in new countries: umpire or oligarch?

In practically every country of the world, power produced by identifying with dis- of New Nations,** is welcome because and hostile towards politicians and slice out of the national income, and exerts a considerable influence on the conduct of affairs. In some states, military groups openly control the machinery of government. When a courageous man like President Olympio of Togo refuses to spend money on an army, he is in for serious trouble. (Olympio was assassinated.)

Not that this is any matter for surprise, given the extremely unstable and turbulent conditions in which the ex-colonial countries have come to independence. Military power is the plainest assertion of sovereignty available. It may not be from military dictatorship: he was strictly rational for India to spend a speaking of giving form, organisation, quarter and Pakistan a half of its budget on military appropriations mainly directed against each other. But mutual suspicion will not allow any reduction in this symbol of national determination not to be kicked around.

The African states south of the Sahara spend much less on their armies than the countries of the Middle East and Asia, but there is plenty of sentiment to push them in the same direction. I remember, at the time of the first French nuclear test in the Sahara, a Nigerian student saying to me, "If we had nuclear weapons, they wouldn't dare do this." The possession of a Nigerian nuclear deterrent would, in his view, have compelled the French to treat West Africans as equals, and not as part of France's backyard.

Another element in the appeal of military organisation is the sheer sense of *Dennis Dobson, 25s.

ciplined bodies of men - people who are not hampered by the contradictory and corrupting loyalties of particular groups within the nation. This emerges clearly in Black Power, an exceptionally interesting book about Ghana just before independence, written by the American Negro novelist Richard Wright.* He came to the conclusion that the surest way to bring Africa out of her fetishriden past, and abolish the "mystical and nonsensical family relations that freeze the African in his static degradation," was to militarise the life of the people. He tried to differentiate this from military dictatorship: he was direction, meaning, and a sense of

"I'm speaking of a temporary discipline that will unite the nation, sweep out the tribal cobwebs, and place the feet of the masses upon a basis of reality. I'm not speaking of guns or secret police; I'm speaking of a method of taking people from one order of life and making them face what men, all men everywhere, must face."

have come across similar attitudes in India, where there is a deeply-felt need for "discipline," often associated with the beneficial effects of military train-

In thinking about the strategy of disarmament, it is important to understand the profound attraction exercised by military values. Morris Janowitz's new book, The Military in the Development

it does thrown some light on this sub- organised political groups. Politicians ject. His aim is to point out common are apt to exploit and increase particufeatures in the internal organisation of larist and communal differences; the armies in Asian and African countries, organisation of the army usually inhibits and to examine the various forms of such differences, and encourages a sense relationship that exist between army of a unified national interest over against and society: in particular, the problems other competing nations. that arise when an army takes over The crucial positive achievement of an political administration.

"The military profession," he remarks quaintly, "operates in an organisational environment that has limited contact with outside clients.'

He examines the various ways in which military régimes have attempted to make contact with their clients and develop political institutions. He finds in the Turkey of Ataturk a relatively admirable model for controlled and restricted intervention, where the military acts as an umpire rather than an oligarchy.

It is all quite interesting so far as it goes, but one would have liked more examination of the effect which such régimes have on the conduct of foreign policy. The most suggestive pages of the book are those which show how armies tend to be recruited from areas away from the centres of political and commercial life. This does not mean that officers will be hostile to modernisation. On the contrary, they probably joined the army as a way of gaining access to centres of power which would otherwise have been denied them. But it does mean that they will tend to feel at odds with the representatives of politics and commerce, to be "critical of sophisticated upper-class urban values, which it comes to consider as corrupt and even decadent."

They tend to be puritanical in outlook,

**University of Chicago Press, 33s 6d.

army is, in fact, often the development of a national consciousness transcending that of the particular communities within the nation. There is no reason why this should not be done by institutions other than the army, and presumably something of the sort is in Kenneth Kaunda's mind in his plan for a training centre for non-violence in Northern Rhodesia.

According to Quaker Service (the bulletin of the American Friends' Service Committee), the main aim of the centre will be to train people in techniques of non-violence, including the police.

"It is judged important that police trainees be schooled in methods of handling non-violent demonstrations. and be familiar with non-violent techniques in their regular duties. . . . Village workers will encounter conflicts of many sorts, including intertribal conflicts. It is thought that the basics of non-violence would be very helpful in their orientation."

A good deal depends on the success of such experiments in developing nonviolent institutions of government. If they become peripheral, as Gandhian institutions in India have tended to be at best a supplement to the real business of running the country - then we are faced with a world increasingly dominated by military elites. It is hardly the most promising path towards a world without war.

SYNANON from page 5

as has its expanding work with neurotics. businessmen; even local merchants in Indeed, in the light of Synanon's work, well-to-do Santa Monica have grown a new and broader conception of the reconciled to having several remember, at the time of the first French nuclear test in the Sahara, a Nigerian student saying to me, "If we had nuclear weapons, they wouldn't dare do this." The possession of a Nigerian nuclear deterrent would, in his view, have compelled the French to treat West Africans as equals, and not as part of France's backyard.

Another element in the appeal of military organisation is the sheer sense of India, where there is a deeply-felt need "discipline," often associated with the beneficial effects of military train-

In thinking about the strategy of disarmament, it is important to understand the profound attraction exercised by military values. Morris Janowitz's new book, The Military in the Development

*Dennis Dobson, 25s.

SYNANON from page 5

as has its expanding work with neurotics, businessmen; even local merchants in Indeed, in the light of Synanon's work, well-to-do Santa Monica have grown a new and broader conception of the reconciled to having several racially addictive personality is emerging, one integrated households of former narwhich embraces the narcotics problem, cotics addicts encamped in their town. are inadequate efforts of human beings maintain its 400 or more patients. Now to meet a deeper and insatiable need. one can take his place as a participating as the first steps toward greater member? When the theory of Synanon's therapeutic experimentation is finally The success of Synanon raises an interdeveloped, it will doubtless draw strongly upon the personalist philosophy of Anton Wallich-Clifford's Simon Com-

Currently Synanon is searching for ways to support its own growth independing among the most derelict members ently of outside contributions. For the past six years Synanon's support has come almost wholly from charitable sources, including many businesses. Surprisingly, the community found a great deal of sympathy on the part of the community has begun to develop autonomy.

esting point. Here, as in the case of munity of ex-convicts in London, we have a communitarian experiment arismodern world in all its affluence and technological splendour has failed most wretchedly. Much of our society finds itself too hopelessly distracted by the rapid pace and excessive complexity of our times to recognise with any precision what its true condition is, what the needs and capacities of men are. And, in turn, it is our nearly universal confusion on these points that completes the circle and contributes to the technological impaction, the surplus production, the compulsive consumption, the power-political acquisitiveness of our society. It is the misfits and failures in our midst - the drunks, the junkies, the jail-birds - who represent the break in this beautifully rationalised circle of vicious ambitions. They have been crudely culled out and left behind.

But those who have hit "rock-bottom," who have failed to fabricate a personality that can adjust successfully to the unhealthy conventions that dominate our times, are perhaps those who are closest to a new vision of personal and social life. They can least easily escape facing themselves and examining their needs. To use Nietzsche's phrase, theirs may be a disease in the same sense that pregzig-zags in North Vietnam and North nancy is a disease. With proper guidance, the personal crisis of the outcast may provide the possibility of communitarian building and social renewal.

away from the centres of political and commercial life. This does not mean that officers will be hostile to modernisation. On the contrary, they probably joined the army as a way of gaining access to centres of power which would otherwise have been denied them. But it does mean that they will tend to feel at odds with the representatives of politics and commerce, to be "critical of sophisticated upper-class urban values, which it comes to consider as corrupt and even decadent."

They tend to be puritanical in outlook,

**University of Chicago Press, 33s 6d.

Village workers will encounter conflicts of many sorts, including intertribal conflicts. It is thought that the basics of non-violence would be very helpful in their orientation."

A good deal depends on the success of such experiments in developing nonviolent institutions of government. If they become peripheral, as Gandhian institutions in India have tended to be at best a supplement to the real business of running the country - then we are faced with a world increasingly dominated by military elites. It is hardly the most promising path towards a world without war.

criminality, alcoholism, and neurosis Last year Synanon raised some $3 milgenerally. It would seem that all these lion in kind and $250,000 in cash to And what can that need be but the need its own economic base. It has opened of a beloved community within which up a machine shop and a filling station figures like Martin Buber.

WE MUST BE ARMED

We don't mean bombs, bayonets, or ballistic missiles. Our arms are books and babyfoods, cots and clothing, medicines and ploughshares.

THE ARMY

Two commands: Doctors, nurses, teachers and workers in many fields throughout the poorer countries of the world and those who fight at home to raise funds and to stimulate interest in the needs of our neighbours overseas.

THE ENEMY

The evils of disease, hunger, ignorance and poverty.

In a world where millions are spent daily on weapons of death and destruction, we are often desperate for the quite small sums needed to provide our front line fighters with their minimum needs.

Hatred and killing have no part in the war on want. We wage war to build a better and happier world for all men everywhere.

Your gift will help to increase and strengthen our armies and give them the arms they so sorely need.

Small or great, your gift received with gratitude by the Hon Treasurer:

Rt Hon James Griffiths PC MP

WAR ON WANT

9 Madeley Road London W5

A collection at work? A dance or social event? A coffee evening?

If you pay tax at standard rate, a covenant provides 12s 8d extra on each 20s at no cost to you.

Jewellery, silver, old Sheffield bring good prices.

OUR GIFT SHOP at 94 Meadow Street, Weston Super Mare.

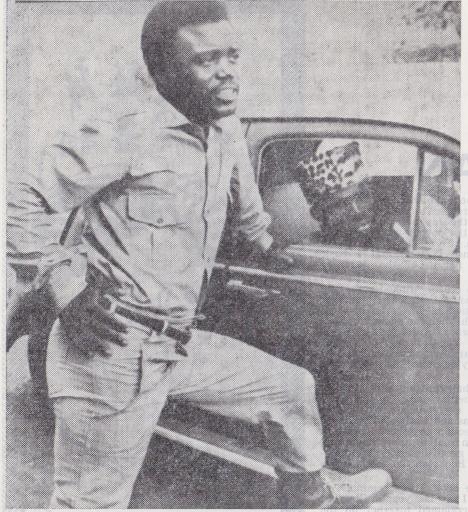

Desperate need for clothing for refugees . . . WAR ON WANT DEPOT, Caxton Street South, London E.16

Asian zig-zags

Communist Strategies in Asia, edited by A. Doak Barnett. (Pall Mall Press, cloth 50s; paper 17s 6d.)

A comparative analysis of governments and parties, with articles by Donald S. Zagoria, Robert C. North, Paul F. Langer, Harry Gelman, Ruth T. McVey, Bernard B. Fall, Glenn D. Paige, and Robert A. Rupen.

The plural in the title is deliberate, as this book points out the diversity of communist strategies in the Asian countries. As Barnett writes in the introduction, "growing 'polycentrism' is already resulting, in Asia as elsewhere, in increased differentiation of viewpoints and policies, substantial diffusion of lines of authority and influence, and decreased unity and co-ordination in the Communist world." The accounts of communist Korea provide an interesting contrast with the more open way in which China became communist.

The rebel president of the Congo, Gaston Soumialot (in car), with his vicepresident, Laurent Kabila, at Albertville on July 26.

Congo rebels The Penguin Book of Japanese Verse. No qook with an introduction by Geoffrey Bonno Qook

rebellion which has been sweeping through the Eastern Congo now covers an area about 550 miles long and between 50 and 300 miles wide. The ease with which the rebels have moved is not a reflection of their own fighting abilities, the Sunday Times report continues. They are not an army at all, but a loose agglomeration of tribal bands, often armed only with machetes, spears and wooden clubs. They are led chiefly by witch doctors. In the past few weeks they have proved almost invulnerable. Their success is due largely to the ineptitude of the Congolese Army.

The Army's failure to deal effectively with the revolt was the major factor behind the formation of Moise Tshombe's "reconciliation" Government last month.

The Congolese Prime Minister, Moise Tshombe, has conceded "in private conversations" the gravity of the situation in the Congo and agreed that the revolts must be put down by military means, a report by J. Anthony Lukas stated in The Sunday Times last Sunday.

On August 5 Stanleyville was seized by the rebels of Gaston Soumialot, and the rebellion which has been sweeping one of the CNL leaders, Andre Lubaya, as his Minister of Health. He also released Antoine Gizenga, the Leftist leader, whose release had long been one of CNL's prime demands. When Gizenga pledged his support to the Government hopes rose that Tshombe might be able to negotiate his way out of the

Since then, however, the reconciliation talks have got nowhere. Christophe Gbenye, one of the chief CNL leaders in Brazzaville, has attacked Lubaya as a "traitor" for dealing with Tshombe. This sentiment has been echoed by Soumialot, who is CNL leader in the Feeling has been growing that the only solution would be some form of outside military intervention. Last Monday, however, in a report in the New York Times, Lukas writes that Tshombe said on August 9 that his Government would not appeal for foreign troops to help put down the spreading wave of rebelium.

He said at a news conference: "We have no need for troops from outside. We have plenty of our own soldiers who can handle the situation. All we need is equipment."

The United States, among others, is

Guantanamo peace walkers will defy US ban on travel to Cuba

The Quebec-Washington-Guantanamo bered as many as fifty full-time parmay be incurred. Ordinarily, in past ticipants, consisted of twenty members actions of this kind, CNVA has voluntarily given authorities fairly specific continued with the project during its information as to the exact time and decided to proceed illegally.

passports valid for travel to Cuba, have hold-up in Miami. Six former long-term place of an action. After serious and walkers are at present serving federal prolonged consideration we hold that the known to feel that the Congolese Army

In an appeal for support published on July 23, A. J. Muste, chairman of the American Committee for Non-Volent American Committee for Non-Volent Department's decision the group has provide government officials with such troops are brought in.

Guantanamo peace walkers will defy US ban on travel to Cuba

The Quebec-Washington-Guantanamo bered as many as fifty full-time par- may be incurred. Ordinarily, in past peace walkers, who have been waiting ticipants, consisted of twenty members actions of this kind, CNVA has volunfor months for a decision by the State when it reached Miami. Ten of these tarily given authorities fairly specific Department on their applications for continued with the project during its information as to the exact time and passports valid for travel to Cuba, have hold-up in Miami. Six former long-term place of an action. After serious and decided to proceed illegally.

In an appeal for support published on July 23, A. J. Muste, chairman of the American Committee for Non-Violent Action, said that a boat capable of taking six of the project members to Cuba has been made available to the peace walkers and is being prepared for the voyage. When it is ready the intention is that it should sail whether or not the walkers have by then received passports made valid for travel to Cuba.

The walkers are calling for an end to counter-revolutionary violence and asking both Cuba and the United States to work out peaceful, non-violent means of resolving their conflict.

The walk team, which at times num- civil disobedience and that penalties lations . . . " walkers are at present serving federal sentences in connection with their oppo- Government has no right to demand conducted a non-violent workshop, car-information. We are in conscience bound at Key West, and stimulated the formatravel ban in general and the ban against tary of State Dean Rusk, telling him which we believe is mistaken, short-sources in Leopoldville have reported that preparations are under way to get sighted, and not conducive to peace . . . rebel activity near Lodja and Kabinda, a group of the peace walkers to Cuba to Finally, the peace walkers would prefer both less than 200 miles from Luluacomplete the Havana to Guantanamo to go to Cuba with the approval of the bourg. portion of the walk. He writes:

prolonged consideration we hold that the sition to the draft.

While in Miami, waiting on the State

Department's decision, the group has provide government officials with such troops are brought in. ried on lengthy discussions with gener- to refuse such information as a protest ally hostile Cuban exiles, demonstrated against the folly and wickedness of the tion of a Miami branch of the Committee travel to Cuba in particular. It is a sign 'He denied what he called "false reports" for Non-Violent Action. also of our protest against the general of trouble in Luluabourg, the major A. J. Muste has sent a letter to Secrepolicy of the United States towards Cuba city in the Kasai region. Diplomatic solution would be some form of outside military intervention. Last Monday, however, in a report in the New York Times, Lukas writes that Tshombe said on August 9 that his Government would not appeal for foreign troops to help put down the spreading wave of rebel-

He said at a news conference: "We have no need for troops from outside. We have plenty of our own soldiers who can handle the situation. All we need is equipment."

The United States, among others, is known to feel that the Congolese Army is incapable of putting down the revolts troops are brought in.

Mr Tshombe repeated his charges that both Burundi and the former French Congo, which border the Congo on the east and west, are aiding the rebels.

State Department. They do not regard Mr Tshombe also reported advances by We are aware that this may involve lightly violation of government regu- Congolese troops in East Katanga and North Katanga provinces.

West Germany: Admiral Heye under attack

last war. The Admiral's detractors have, therefore, tried other tactics. They claimed he had overstepped the mark

PPU PEACE PAGEANT LONDON

Change of date: NOW 2 p.m. SATURDAY NOVEMBER 14

All joining motorcade or marching enrol at once so that parts can be allocated Details 6 Endsleigh St, WC1 EUS 5501 and FLA 7906

MP and psychiatrist. At a Bundeswehr effect that only lieutenants and above "open day" in Alt-Ahlen, Frau Pannhoff claimed that her erstwhile parliamentary colleague was "beyond it." She claimed Just how dangerous the West German 1964) the Admiral replied that he was

is not well in the Bundeswehr was given Admiral Heye. Concentration is conby the death of a 20-year-old para conscript, Anton Deigl (Peace News, August 7). Deigl reported for duty on July 1 concerns accounted for 17.7% of West ago. Until very recently this Nazi legal and was dead by July 17. Like his German industrial turnover. In 1960 the theorist was a minister in Bavaria. Only she had often observed the Admiral in officer class could be is shown by an unparliament and had long ago formed this challenged article in the West German expert opinion. In Der Spiegel (July 29, neutralist paper, Deutsche Volkszeitung (July 31). The paper quotes Paul Wilused to such attacks. In fact, a similar helm Wenger of the Conservative attack had saved him during the war. He Rheinischer Merkur as saying that the had refused to carry out an order and then Commander of the Bundeswehr, his superiors, somewhat embarrassed, Heusinger, had urged the US to use festival. An article in Die Zeit (July 24) had said his mental powers were de-military force to smash the Berlin Wall condemns this and points out that in immediately after its erection.

New proof, if it were needed, that all West German industry too needs its

David Childs writes: It was only to be expected that when Admiral Heye, the West German forces ombudsman or Wehrbeauftragter, denounced the old reactionary spirit in the Bundeswehr he would be attacked. Naturally it would have been very difficult to try and claim have been very difficult to try and claim have been very difficult to try and claim have been very difficult to try and printed statements attributed to a West German NCO-instructor, Wilfried Lüsebrink, who, the paper says, defected to the East recently. The paper's account has an authoritative ring about it. The NCO is quoted as saying, for instance, that on the wall of his he country, were supplying arms to lieutenant's room hung a slogan to the largest industrial enterprises in the country, were supplying arms to lieutenant's room hung a slogan to the effect that only lieutenants and above President Nasser it bodes ill for the future if German firms should feel it necessary to get in on this sort of Finally, a word about two Nazis who have made a comeback. One is the wellknown Nazi film director. Leni Riefenstahl. In Bremen, a film festival lasting a week was devoted to her films glorifying Nazism. She has also been invited to take part in this year's Berlin film socialist-controlled Bremen, the only people to protest were some teenagers who were promptly arrested for causing comrade Trimborn last year, Deigl died share of the top fifty had risen to a hard fight has forced him out of office after collapsing during a training march. On July 25 the East German Neues again be being used for the wrong pur- university.

Tom McGrath

POETRY FROM JAPAN

The Penguin Book of Japanese Verse. Translated with an introduction by Geoffrey Bownas and Anthony Thwaite. 7s 6d.

This is one of the most complete collections of Japanese verse I have seen. Every poet of any importance is included, together with anonymous poetry and folk poetry previously difficult to obtain in translation. The introduction by Anthony Thwaite and Geoffrey Bownas carefully relates the history and development of Japanese verse, and the part poetry plays in the social life of the Japanese people is graphically described. The book is both a complete collection and a readers' guide. Yet I found it

I feel that the very nature of Japanese verse precludes it from ever being successfully presented in a collection of this size and scope. The poems are crammed together, one crowding on top of another. Instead of the evocative space that surrounded the Japanese poems so sensitively translated by Kenneth Rexroth when the craze for Japanese poetry was in its early stages, we find the slender haiku grouped so close together that they appear as one long poem:

Sad and forlorn: the shrike and state of the shrike Bears on its back
The gold of the sunset.

Sticking out my head from

The hot hell of the mosquito net - 1289 1010st 1018m Autumn wind, word peep grown and Autumn wind.

Autumn wind -I open out My ashen palm.

Japanese poetry just cannot be appreciated if read in this way. Each poem should be a separate entity, offering most to the reader when he is prepared to view it in its separateness. Each poem takes a place in silence and depends on the silence surrounding it as much as the sounds of words for its effect.

The first poem quoted above finishes on the word "sunset" and leaves the reader to the silence that follows. At this moment the Japanese poem makes its communication; where the poem's words end and the reader's thoughts begin. To fill this moment with anything other than silence is to reveal a basic misunderstanding of the nature of the Japanese

Of course the Japanese do create "linked verse" in which several short poems are presented together in a loosely-connected sequence. But even in these silence is all-important, both when the poem is spoken and when it is written down. On the page, space is the equivalent of silence. The Japanese poets take care that their characters are well spaced out so that the poems, though they may be linked, do not intrude on one another.

This criticism may sound hair-splitting and precious, but I feel it is a fundamental one. In one sense Penguin books have done everyone a great service by allowing Geoffrey Bownas and Anthony Thwaite to bring so complete a collection together at such a relatively low price. But in another, more important, sense they have done us a great disservice by imposing the format of Penguin Books on the subtle forms of Japanese verse.

When reading through the book, I was reminded of an exhibition of Paul Klee I saw last year in Glasgow. So many paintings were crammed together on the walls that a friend remarked: "The trouble is you can't see Klee for the Klees." In the Penguin book the poem is obscured by the Japanese verse. The important relationship, between the poem and its immediate environment, the printed page, has been completely missed.

A final criticism: why does the book appear without illustrations? Surely the Penguin format could have for once been abandoned in order to show the importance of the graphic arts in Japanese verse? A few of Sengai's picture poems, carefully placed, might have made the collection appear less "square."

A poem-drawing by Sengai, one of the most accomplished of Japanese Zen creators. (Reprinted from "The World of Zen," published by Collins.)

Edward Owen

NUCLEAR WARNINGS

Autumn wind. I open out My ashen palm.

Japanese poetry just cannot be appreciated if read in this way. Each poem should be a separate entity. offering most to the reader when he is prepared to view it in its separateness. Each poem takes a place in silence and depends on the silence surrounding it as much as the sounds of words for its effect.

important relationship, between the poem and its immediate environment, the printed page, has been completely missed.

A final criticism: why does the book appear without illustrations? Surely the Penguin format could have for once been abandoned in order to show the importance of the graphic arts in Japanese verse? A few of Sengai's picture poems, carefully placed, might have made the collection appear less "square."

A poem-drawing by Sengai, one of the most accomplished of Japanese Zen creators. (Reprinted from "The World of Zen," published by Collins.)

Edward Owen

NUCLEAR WARNINGS

Nuclear Disaster, by Tom Stonier. Fore- produced in Nuclear Disaster a little Nuclear War, de Kadt, a Dutch sociolo- of the nature and size of the supposed Books, 4s.)

British Defence Policy and Nuclear War. by Emanuel J. de Kadt. (Frank Cass, 21s.)

The Intelligent Woman's Guide to Atomic Radiation, by Margot Bennett. (Penguin Books, 3s 6d.)

Though Hiroshima Day is a reminder. there is fortunately no current Cubalike crisis* to foment anxiety about the bomb. Nevertheless, we ought to go on worrying, because the underlying crisis is a continuing one - the crisis of human attitudes not yet adjusted to the suicidal destructiveness of nuclear weapons. In order to make this adjustment, we need to be repeatedly and vividly reminded of the dire consequences of not doing so (inevitably, this is "playing on fear" to some extent, but it is also playing on intelligence, concern for others, etc.).

Here are three books to do this necessary if unpopular job of making us worry. The first depicts the catastrophic results for America of being involved in a nuclear exchange; the second demonstrates how futile as well as dangerous it is for this country to brandish an "independent deterrent"; and the third explains, especially to mothers and potential mothers, how harmful it will be to all of us if the bomb is so much as tested in the open again. They are all serious, well-documented books, and nuclear disarmers should obtain the two Penguins for reference if nothing else. Tom Stonier, an American biologist, has *This review was written before the Cyprus and Vietnam crises.

word by Robert Jungk. (Penguin masterpiece of "Doomsday" literature - gist working in London, traces the attack - a criticism that de Kadt levels, painstakingly thorough, soberly but development of Western (i.e. American) too, at CND literature, which he says imaginatively presented. His study is defence thinking from Dulles's "massive has been "increasingly serious and wellparticularly revealing in regard to the retaliation" through McNamara's doclong-term ecological effects of H-Bomb trine of "counterforce" (nuclear weapons

"Until fairly recently," he points out, "public discussions dealing with fallout were concerned almost solely with the potential effects on man. This emphasis is not only egocentric, it is naive. For if fallout is capable of killing human beings, it is also capable of killing other creatures, and it is well known that even concentration of events which may ultimately profoundly alter the relationship between man and his environment."

Among the phenomena he envisages are insect plagues, the destruction of forests and plant cover by irradiation, fire, disease and insect attack, the creation of new dust bowls and deserts, and the cooling-down of the world's climate. Such considerations convince him that certain much-quoted estimates of America's "recovery potential" are altogether too sanguine. "If in their novels Aldous Huxley and Walter Miller have painted extreme pictures of the a world in which everybody must be aftermath of nuclear war, they are no more extreme than some of the so-called objective analysts who believe that a return to pre-war society could be achieved within about a decade.'

Because nations cannot accept the fact that destructive capacity such as Stonier describes means the end of war as an instrument of policy, statesmen and their military advisers continue the search for strategies that will make sense of the bomb. In British Defence Policy and to be used primarily on military targets) to recent theories of "limited strategic war," of which he says: "One can hardly conclude that this latest attempt at formulating a nuclear strategy has been a success . . . The uncertainties remain, with their possibly disastrous consequences."

A similar analysis of this country's desmall changes in nature can lead to a fence policy brings him to the conclusion that "the British nuclear force, as it exists today, deters in fact only the most unlikely of all possible threats" and represents an unjustifiable additional nuclear risk. Nevertheless, he recognises that there is still the instinccountries are working to get them. To this he replies: "However absurd it may seem to abandon nuclear weapons now, it seems even more absurd to opt for an increasingly dangerous world, a world bristling with big and little deterrents. suspicious of everybody else."

> De Kadt then considers what the effects might be if Britain's present policy brought on us a nuclear attack. He criticises Civil Defence literature for underplaying these effects, failing to present an overall picture, giving impracticable advice and making misleading statements (e.g. about the degree of protection against fall-out radiation afforded by the average household's refuge room"). In a revealing study of the likely reactions of people under nuclear attack, he shows that existing Civil Defence plans "completely disregard . . . well-established facts about human behaviour in extreme situa-

Civil Defence booklets are also taken to task for failing to give any indication has been "increasingly serious and well-informed." He describes the Peace News "Black Paper on H-Bomb War" as "on the whole an excellent critique of Civil Defence thinking," but again finds it too vague about the type of attack envisaged.

He himself would expect, in the sort of situation most likely to provoke nuclear assault on Britain, a retaliatory attack on the main population centres of England and Wales of between 50 and 60 megatons - air-burst to cause the widest possible damage and therefore producing little fall-out.

"Even without fall-out the consequences are staggering," he writes. "Such a strike would not leave the entire country a radioactive rubble-heap, but it would tive military objection to giving up do immense damage. The toll in lives nuclear weapons at a time when other may be gauged from the fact that the population of the areas listed . . . totals more than 20 million. No more than a dozen IRBMs and four ICBMs would have to be used."

After so much discussion of war, Margot Bennett's "first reader in the most uncomfortable subject in the world," as the publishers call it, seems comparatively unalarming, but it is another kind of warning, written to help create an informed and alert public opinion about bomb tests and radiation hazards. This it should certainly do, for she succeeds in conveying in clear and readable form all the essential information about nuclear energy, genetic processes and radiation effects.

i renounce war and I will never support or sanction another

This pledge signed by each member is the basis of the Peace Pledge Union send your pledge to PPU Headquarters Dick Sheppard House 6 Endsleigh Street WC1

Who are the real friends of the oppressed peoples? Read

THE NATIONAL LIBERATION MOVEMENT TODAY

as seen by Dutt, Khrushchev and others

Order from Forum (6), 41 Atholl Mansions, South Lambeth Road, London S.W.8, Price 1s 4d post free.

Non-violence and did A2 elits of bid w the Harlem reports: During the the facade of allowing opposition. How. Chairman. The South African Governe ever, by the fachnique he is adopting he Alan Paton, had Stories and a supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he Alan Paton, had Stories and a supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he Alan Paton, had Stories and a supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he alan Paton, had Stories and a supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he alan Paton, had Stories and a supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he alan Paton had supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he alan Paton had supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he alan had been a supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he alan had been a supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he alan had been a supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he alan had been a supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he alan had been a supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he alan had been a supplied to the fachnique he is adopting he Bayard Rustin has been too busy to reply their ugly way, these youths were ex- to the police commissioner's tempor-to Robert Calese's criticism (Peace News, pressing what we, by non-violent resistantly prohibiting rallies in the name of to Robert Calese's criticism (Peace News, pressing what we, by non-violent resist- arily prohibiting rallies in the name of August 7) of the non-violent civil rights ance, believe. If society will not remove law and order. It has brought division leaders in Harlem; but we reprint here the slums and give them work and of leadership where unity was needed if a comment on the Harlem riots which dignity, they will cry out again. Bayard Rustin wrote for the War Re- We pacifists assert that violence degrades be pursued. It has confused many young sisters League News. A reply to Robert all who become involved in it. How Calese by Jim Peck, Publicity Director true! I know many police officers in of the WRL, is also printed here.

ing the tragic event called the Harlem many police officers who are among the riot, I walked the streets with a team better-behaved, reacted with the greatest of 75 boys and men. We took the fear and consequently with the most injured to CORE's first aid station or to brutal conduct. I saw a white officer, the hospital. We dispersed crowds. We who had once turned over to me a 15did what we could to protect women and children and had some minor success in home and report his behaviour to his urging police who had arrested innocent father, beat a woman to the ground people to free them - especially when mercilessly. When I urged him to stop, doing so contributed to crowd dis- he turned on me.

nights has deepened my faith in non- to stop a white taxi driver. After her violence and I should like to share with sons had beaten him almost to unconyou some of my thoughts ten days sciousness, she helped them to rob him, later.

Never was this more clearly illustrated. order were youths between 18 and 25. They are the unemployed, the forgotten. the poorest of the poor - without hope they who are forced to live by their wits, seeking out a living by gambling, selling numbers or dope and sometimes selling

Like a child in an attention-seeking flict. tantrum, they resorted to violence in a loud outcry of despair.

Harlem by name and many more by sight and reputation. One of the saddest From dusk till dawn for four nights dur- aspects of those nights was the fact that year-old thief on pledge that I take him

On the other hand, I saw a Negro The experiences of those four terrible churchwoman help to blockade a street leaving him in great agony on the street. We pacifists maintain that the law of Thus on those nights I saw violence ends and means does, in fact, operate. degrade on every side. I heard men who usually talk reasonably demand that Most of the people who engaged in dis- youth be given guns to shoot "police and uncle toms.'

We pacifists urge non-violence because if change toward justice is to take place, and with no faith in a society which has it must be in an atmosphere where doomed them to utter despair. It is creative conflict and debate are possible. Wherever great force is used - and I am certain from what I saw that the force used by police was far more than necessary to maintain order - it is used to many lives. Some were beaten, as I was, They revolted in the only way left to support the status quo and not to en- for advocating non-violence, but only them. They would make society listen, courage real debate and creative con- one deserted.

it has given strength to the supporters cated to non-violence, for I see clearly We pacifists claim that social progress of reaction. It has brought an injunc- how resort to violence dehumanises all must spring from social justice. In tion against certain groups. It has led who are caught up in its whirlpool.

non-violent campaigns for justice are to people. It has left the powers-that-be in a position to call for "law and order" for protection of white people - a very In a riotous, racist situation such as false position since the riot was economic rather than basically racial.

Perhaps the most important lesson I learned from this experience is that non-violence is relevant to a degree even when fear, brutality and violence rage. On the second afternoon of the riot, I spoke at a big Harlem church. Several speakers preceded me, calling upon youth to use violence. One speaker called for a Mau Mau, another for armed resistance to police. Another said: "I want 100 men to leave this church with project. me for guerilla warfare."

Then I spoke and urged non-violence. I was booed, applauded and then booed again. I appealed for 100 men to join me in the streets and work non-violently "to end the brutality toward all men." When the meeting ended, I rose to leave the church and was surrounded by a hostile group intent on beating me. From the audience came 75 men who moved in to protect me without violence. The hostile group scattered.

That night and for three succeeding nights, those 75 men walked in danger through the streets and were responsible for helping many persons and saving

And so, reliving those four nights of The riot has not encouraged real debate: terror and ugliness, I become more dedi-

A reply to Robert Calese

occurred in Harlem, to put in white demonstrators, as Robert Calese suggested, would simply inflame tempers and worsen the violence. Calese tells about going into Harlem during that period, but if he ventured into the trouble spots, he might well have suffered the same fate as the white cab driver whom Bayard Rustin mentions in his article. I therefore think it was wise of the Congress of Racial Equality to use its Negro members exclusively for this

Use of a disproportionate number of white police inflamed the situation. James Farmer, in an article in the forthcoming CORElator, relates an incident in which CORE members got a sizeable number of riotous youths away from a trouble spot by starting a march toward another section. All went well until, after marching a few blocks, a group of white cops confronted the marchers and inflamed them into violence.

As for Calese's suggestion that CORE should have been out in the streets demonstrating during the riots, I think this would have been utter madness. It would have served only to falsely equate and identify non-violent civil rights demonstrations with rioting, which the rightists do anyway. Actually, the two have no relation except that the failure of city officials to act on the demands of the civil rights organisations - jobs, schools, housing and a halt to police brutality - sparked the rioting.

Letters to

they who are forced to live by their wits. seeking out a living by gambling, selling certain from what I saw that the force through the streets and were responsible this would have been utter madness. It numbers or dope and sometimes selling used by police was far more than neces- for helping many persons and saving would have served only to falsely equate themselves.

them. They would make society listen, courage real debate and creative con- one deserted. Like a child in an attention-seeking flict. tantrum, they resorted to violence in a The riot has not encouraged real debate: terror and ugliness, I become more dediloud outcry of despair.

it has given strength to the supporters cated to non-violence, for I see clearly We pacifists claim that social progress of reaction. It has brought an injunc- how resort to violence dehumanises all must spring from social justice. In tion against certain groups. It has led who are caught up in its whirlpool.

wherever great force is used - and I am nights, those 75 men walked in danger demonstrating during the riots, I think sary to maintain order - it is used to many lives. Some were beaten, as I was, They revolted in the only way left to support the status quo and not to en- for advocating non-violence, but only

And so, reliving those four nights of and identify non-violent civil rights demonstrations with rioting, which the rightists do anyway. Actually, the two have no relation except that the failure of city officials to act on the demands of the civil rights organisations - jobs. schools, housing and a halt to police brutality - sparked the rioting.

It is time we took a closer look not only at the NATO multilateral force but also at the various campaigns against it. It is common knowledge that at the

Not loved

It has been said that "all the world loves a lover." The same cannot be said of peaceworkers. For myself, while participating in various peace actions during the past twelve months, I have been refused entry into Austria and Greece; threatened by the Mafia in Sicily; deported from Malta; imprisoned in England; and challenged to a duel in London. The experiences of others would also amply bear out this point.

However, one way of crossing boundaries, particularly for those in other countries who are isolated, is through the pages of Peace News. It often means a financial loss to us to help keep these people in touch, but there would be a greater loss if we did not. Please help us to cross frontiers; any contribution, large or small, will be equally appreciated, and certainly not wasted.

PETER MOULE

total since February 1

contributions this week £104 10 9 we need £5000 by February 1965 Please make cheques etc payable to Clare Anneslev Treasurer Peace News 5 Caledonian Road London N1 moment the Communist-front World Council of Peace is prompting a vast anti-MLF offensive. Its purpose is, of course, to promote the power-political advantage of the Communist bloc.

The International Confederation for Disarmament and Peace at its recent meeting in Florence decided to go into action against MLF, but the setting of its policy is by no means clear.

Those of us whose opposition to MLF is but one expression of our general opposition to all bombs and all military alliances can expect to find ourselves either in the company of some unwelcome friends or at least in a very confused situation.

We have had similar experiences in the past - in the Cuban and Greek demonstrations. Things can become extremely difficult. By way of initial remedy we need to make our independent position very plain indeed immediately.

We have lived from hand to mouth long enough. It is now imperative that the movement has a policy for the future of 5 Acton Way, Cambridge. Europe as a whole. In the light of such a general policy we can make an intelligent approach to a particular problem such as MLF.

At present there are four military views MLF, the Gaullist Franco-German apand the expectations of Khrushchev and rate of income tax by 1s in the £. ruins.

MLF is just one of the dangers. What the idea that they examine their purses of the others? The French Prime and their consciences and give, now, the Minister has just been to the Pacific to equivalent of an increase of 1s in the £ inspect preparations for his impending on their income tax assessment to those nuclear tests there; and there is appar- organisations working to help the less ently evidence to suggest that atmosprivileged two-thirds of mankind. Apart pheric tests may recently have taken from Friends own work through Friends place in the Sahara. So much for the Service Council, the Freedom from

Letters to The Delivery As Peace News Went to press to the Editor The Editor To the Ed

West struggle and their situation worsens from day to day. The US and most of the states of Europe including the USSR are pouring arms into Africa and the Middle East. Germany remains divided for East-West military reasons and the Berlin Wall is still up. The kind of civil liberties that would make possible the creation of an independent peace movement on the other side of the Iron Curtain do not yet exist. There are new vicious emergency laws in Germany and France. Rearmament and conscription intensify throughout the whole of Europe.

If we were to start to list the opposite of all these things we should be beginning to define the kind of Europe we want, but the purpose of this letter is more to raise the question than to answer it. When we have the answer the way to a principled anti-MLF campaign will be clear - and not before.

Peter Cadogan.

Overseas aid

In your issue of April 24 you mentioned the proposal by the Society of Friends of the future of the continent and from to the Government that the amount sent the non-aligned point of view there is from this country each year to help the nothing to commend any of them. There underdeveloped countries should be inis the US-German view as embodied in creased to at least three times the present scale. This could be met by an proach, the new British military plan increase in, for example, the standard his Communist critics. The old NATO- Here is a clear case where the individual Warsaw Pact line-up is more or less in need not await Government action. May we recommend to all those who support test-ban treaty . . . The peoples of Hunger Campaign, War on Want and London S.E.6.

Cyprus are the victims of a vicious East- many others would willingly see that the money is used wisely and well to enable the needy to help themselves.

While each must decide for himself how much he gives it could be taken as a rough guide that the above result would be reached by giving about one-eighth of what one now pays in tax.

Incidentally, if you covenant your gift the Government will augment it by over 60% by returning some of the tax you have paid.

Alan Staley, For the Peace & Service Committee, Brighton Meeting of the Society of 39 St Keyna Avenue, Hove 3, Sussex.

Preventive detention

Answering your comment on "The end of PD" (July 31), this Council regards the question of the Government's intention to abolish preventive detention with some reservation. No one has yet seen the intended Bill, and until it can be examined in detail our thoughts on the subject must necessarily be incomplete. Nevertheless, assuming the facts as reported in the press, we do feel that any attempt to apply increased prison sentences in place of PD must be fought. If this is the true intention of the Bill we would regard it as a retrograde step for one reason at least - there is no serious effort by the authorities to eliminate our many out-dated prisons such as Brixton, Wandsworth, Holloway, Stafford and Dartmoor, to name but a few - and to send anyone to such prisons today, for terms from two to a maximum of fourteen years, which might happen in special cases if we read the press reports aright, cannot be progressive and would indeed confirm our impression already, that it is a good step backwards.

Charles Varney, Chairman, Prison Reform Council, 17 Canadian Avenue,

New bid to stifle SA Liberal Party

Wendy Butlin reports: During the the facade of allowing opposition. How Chairman. The National President, Mr was taking place in the house she lived month of July the South African Governever, by the technique he is adopting he Alan Paton, had his passport taken away in. ment intensified its efforts to put an end to the South African Liberal Party. The party itself has not been declared illegal but a great many of its leading members have been banned or are being detained under the 90-day detention

Dr Hans Meidner, who was chairman of the Natal division of the party and who recently arrived here from South Africa, told a press conference last Tuesday that he thinks the Minister of Justice does not want to ban the Liberal Party itself, because he wishes to maintain

Civil Defence secrets: three held

Three members of the Kent Committee of 100 were arrested early on the morning of Thursday, August 6, and the police recovered documents from their car which are files marked "restricted"; they related to Government defence plans in the event of nuclear attack. The authorities disclosed last Sunday that secret Civil Defence documents were stolen in two raids in Barkingside and Ilford some months ago. The documents found in the detained men's car are some of the stolen items.

Among the documents was a secret list of people selected by the Government to man underground shelters built as Regional Seats of Government in case of war. The Special Branch are apparently convinced that they have tracked down the "Spies for Peace," whose movement first became known in April last year, when it published pamphlets stating the locations of the RSGs and organised a demonstration at the RSG at Warren Row near Reading, during the Easter march from Aldermaston to

Two of the men are in Brixton Prison and the other, aged 19, is in Ashford Remand Centre. As Peace News went to press it was understood that the three were to appear at Stratford Magistrates' Court East London on Thursday is obviously trying completely to stifle Liberal opinion. Dr Meidner said that the Liberal Party is the only existing functioning organ in South Africa in which black and white citizens co-operate - in fact, this co-operation is the party's ciple of universal adult suffrage; also finement. He has no visitors, he cannot broadcasting service and ask speakers they have rejected violence as a way of consult a lawyer and the police are not for copies of their speeches. After solving the problems of South Africa. The party has approximately 3,000 members, that is, with subscriptions paid up and holding membership cards. There are also a considerable number "in the authorities are not obliged to bring Contact, the South African Liberal maga-

because, although it is not very large, it A banned person cannot publish any- Dr Meidner said "If you agree to be some years ago. About 12 people have Dr Meidner's experience of attending been warned to desist from activities on behalf of the Liberal Party and several South Africa was that there were always people have had their premises searched. large numbers of police in the hall The published lists are, however, known taking notes and quite often police at to be incomplete.

South African Liberals support the prin- that the detainee is kept in solitary con- of pretending to speak on behalf of some obliged to tell his relatives where he is. African members have attended meetrear" who don't want their names to any charge at all, and at the end of zine, is struggling to keep going under appear on cards or files.

any charge at all, and at the end of zine, is struggling to keep going under the 90 days the victim may be released extremely difficult conditions. It has The Government cannot ignore the party or held for a further 90 days.

appeals to "the young, thinking people." thing and cannot attend any gathering editor of Contact you know it will not Among the banned and detained mem-bers are many from the universities. A nected with politics. Another former Mr Mark Bonham Carter of the British list published by the party includes 17 SA Liberal Party member, Mrs Marion Liberal Party also attended the press people being detained and 10 people Friedmann, told of someone she knew conference and expressed his Party's who have been banned. Among those who was banned and was forbidden to solidarity with its colleagues in South banned is Mr Peter Brown, the National attend her child's birthday party which the doors tape-recording the proceedings. Detention under the 90-day law means Frequently the police use the device had a succession of different editors. As

'Suicidal belligerence' in Vietnam, says Russell

On August 7 Bertrand Russell issued a made by United States planes. In one statement in which he said that the American attacks on North Vietnam had no justification and that they re-flected the disastrous consequences of United States policy in South East

"The war in South Vietnam," the statement says, "is a popular national revolution which has a non-communist leadership and massive national popular backing. The war is conducted despite the offer of all parties but the Americans to accept a neutral solution in accordance with the Geneva conferences of 1954 and 1962. The war in South Vietnam has seen seven million people placed in barbed wire camps patrolled by machine gun bearing guards and police dogs. 160,000 have died, 700,000 have been maimed, 350,000 imprisoned and 16 000 internment compa year, 14,000 villages were destroyed.

"This brutal policy has done irreparable damage to the United States apart from the horrible suffering it has caused the people of Vietnam.

The United States must be made to stop this war and to agree to the request vietnamese vessels and installations. The of U Thant and of world opinion to negotiate now. The Geneva 14-nation conference should be immediately conpolice South-East Asia and other distant vened after a cease-fire.

American agreement to a conference disaster. Let us reflect on how the such as that held in 1954 or condemn American people would feel if foreign the United States as an aggressor. The and unfriendly warships were cruising

A. J. Muste, National Chairman of the Committee for Non-violent Action (CNVA), in a telegram of August 5 to President Johnson, said:

"The Committee for Non-violent Action deplores the attack made by United States warships and planes on North vened after a cease-fire. parts of the world is politically and "I hope the United Nations will demand morally wrong and bound to lead to alternative will be acquiescence in off our own shores thousands of miles American extension of this war to the North, the involvement of China, and, quite inexorably, a world war. This Gulf of Tonkin and of American troops must not be permitted. What worse can from South Vietnam, and steps to Goldweter do if the men who claim to Goldwater do, if the men who claim to abandon policies based on nuclear milidetained under the 90-day detention

Dr Hans Meidner, who was chairman of the Natal division of the party and who recently arrived here from South Africa, told a press conference last Tuesday that he thinks the Minister of Justice does not want to ban the Liberal Party itself, because he wishes to maintain

Civil Defence secrets: three held

Three members of the Kent Committee of 100 were arrested early on the morning of Thursday, August 6, and the police recovered documents from their car which are files marked "restricted"; they related to Government defence plans in the event of nuclear attack. The authorities disclosed last Sunday that secret Civil Defence documents were stolen in two raids in Barkingside and Ilford some months ago. The documents found in the detained men's car are some of the stolen items.

Among the documents was a secret list of people selected by the Government to man underground shelters built as Regional Seats of Government in case of war. The Special Branch are apparently convinced that they have tracked down the "Spies for Peace," whose movement first became known in April last year, when it published pamphlets stating the locations of the RSGs and organised a demonstration at the RSG at Warren Row near Reading, during the Easter march from Aldermaston to

Two of the men are in Brixton Prison and the other, aged 19, is in Ashford Remand Centre. As Peace News went to press it was understood that the three were to appear at Stratford Magistrates' Court, East London, on Thursday, August 13. The Director of Public Prosecutions was considering whether to press charges under the Official Secrets

Peter Moule, acting National secretary of the Committee of 100, told Peace News on Tuesday that the Regional Committees of 100 are considering what forms of action and support they can undertake should serious charges be brought against the three men.

Londoners & social and to to help Irish itinerants

Gratton Puxon writes: Many more families have now joined Itinerant Action, the organisation campaigning for better conditions for travelling neonle in Ire-

- in fact, this co-operation is the party's to be incomplete.

South African Liberals support the prin- that the detainee is kept in solitary con- of pretending to speak on behalf of some ciple of universal adult suffrage; also finement. He has no visitors, he cannot broadcasting service and ask speakers they have rejected violence as a way of consult a lawyer and the police are not solving the problems of South Africa. obliged to tell his relatives where he is. The party has approximately 3,000 mem- At any time of the day or night he is ings they almost invariably have police bers, that is, with subscriptions paid up liable to be interrogated by people visiting their homes, searching and and holding membership cards. There trained to break down the personality. questioning them. are also a considerable number "in the The authorities are not obliged to bring Contact, the South African Liberal magarear" who don't want their names to any charge at all, and at the end of zine, is struggling to keep going under appear on cards or files.

because, although it is not very large, it A banned person cannot publish any—Dr Meidner said "If you agree to be appeals to "the young, thinking people." thing and cannot attend any gathering editor of Contact you know it will not Among the banned and detained mem—however small or apparently uncon—be for very long."

Detention under the 90-day law means Frequently the police use the device The Government cannot ignore the party or held for a further 90 days.

bers are many from the universities. A list published by the party includes 17 SA Liberal Party member, Mrs Marion people being detained and 10 people who have been banned. Among those who have been banned. Among those banned is Mr Peter Brown, the National the doors tape-recording the proceedings. for copies of their speeches. After African members have attended meet-the 90 days the victim may be released extremely difficult conditions. It has had a succession of different editors. As

'Suicidal belligerence' in Vietnam, says Russell

On August 7 Bertrand Russell issued a made by United States planes. In one statement in which he said that the American attacks on North Vietnam had no justification and that they reflected the disastrous consequences of United States policy in South East

"The war in South Vietnam," the statement says, "is a popular national revolution which has a non-communist leadership and massive national popular backing. The war is conducted despite the offer of all parties but the Americans to accept a neutral solution in accordance with the Geneva conferences of 1954 and 1962. The war in South Vietnam has seen seven million people placed in barbed wire camps patrolled by machine gun bearing guards and police dogs. 160,000 have died, 700,000 have been maimed, 350,000 imprisoned and 16,000 internment camps constructed by the end of 1963.

"In one year, 50,000 air attacks were ence?" and gmord at ease to list year, 14,000 villages were destroyed. "This brutal policy has done irreparable damage to the United States apart from the horrible suffering it has caused the people of Vietnam.

The United States must be made to stop this war and to agree to the request of U Thant and of world opinion to negotiate now. The Geneva 14-nation conference should be immediately convened after a cease-fire. "I hope the United Nations will demand such as that held in 1954 or condemn the United States as an aggressor. The and unfriendly warships were cruising alternative will be acquiescence in off our own shores thousands of miles American extension of this war to the from their home base. We urge with-North, the involvement of China, and, drawal of the Seventh Fleet from the quite inexorably, a world war. This Gulf of Tonkin and of American troops must not be permitted. What worse can from South Vietnam, and steps to Goldwater do, if the men who claim to abandon policies based on nuclear milioppose him do so by outbidding him tary force and to place the vast resources in madness and suicidal belliger of this nation at the disposal of the

A. J. Muste, National Chairman of the Committee for Non-violent Action (CNVA), in a telegram of August 5 to President Johnson, said:

"The Committee for Non-violent Action deplores the attack made by United States warships and planes on North Vietnamese vessels and installations. The whole policy of American military intervention in Vietnam and the attempt to police South-East Asia and other distant parts of the world is politically and morally wrong and bound to lead to American agreement to a conference disaster. Let us reflect on how the American people would feel if foreign needy of the earth.'

Colour bar strike in Glasgow

Kilpatrick depot of the Scottish Motor said. Transport Company, near Glasgow, Mr Arthur Newman, traffic manager of staged two strikes last week over the the company, said later that this was the employment of coloured workers.

The strikes - on Monday, August 3, and Saturday, August 8 - each lasted no more than a few hours. of stew sw ers are willing to work unusual shifts and under conditions which white crews a further eight workers will join the would not tolerate. The employment of depot shortly from training school. coloured crews has been increased re- After Monday's strike Mr William

David Healy reports: About half the 500 made to the management without effect the Transport and General Workers' bus drivers and conductors at the Old during the past few weeks, a striker Union, told the crews that the union will > the company, said later that this was the first time there had been any trouble about colour, and it came as a surprise. No representations had been made to him by the union, he said.

The strikers claimed that coloured work- Eighteen men out of the total force at the depot are coloured, he added, and cently and representations have been Scholes, Scottish regional secretary of

not support any action to prevent the employment of coloured people.

The shop steward for the bus crews, Mr Adam Conn, would not speak of a colour bar - he would only refer to "foreign workers." There was high unemployment in the area, and the demand was for an agreed percentage of foreign workers. He did not say what this percentage should be.

Mr Joseph Gilroy of the Transport and General Workers' Union again stated that no action which discriminated against coloured poople would

of people selected by the Government to man underground shelters built as Regional Seats of Government in case of war. The Special Branch are apparently convinced that they have tracked down the "Spies for Peace," whose movement first became known in April last year, when it published pamphlets stating the locations of the RSGs and organised a demonstration at the RSG at Warren Row near Reading, during the Easter march from Aldermaston to London.

Two of the men are in Brixton Prison and the other, aged 19, is in Ashford Remand Centre. As Peace News went to press it was understood that the three were to appear at Stratford Magistrates' Court, East London, on Thursday, August 13. The Director of Public Prosecutions was considering whether to press charges under the Official Secrets Act.

Peter Moule, acting National secretary of the Committee of 100, told Peace News on Tuesday that the Regional Committees of 100 are considering what forms of action and support they can undertake should serious charges be brought against the three men.

Londoners & Series Londoners to help Irish itinerants

Gratton Puxon writes: Many more families have now joined Itinerant Action, the organisation campaigning for better conditions for travelling people in Ireland. A total of 57 families, numbering more than 300 people, are at present camping as squatters on the outskirts of Dublin at Ballyfermot.

The camp has its own football club, a weekly wall newspaper, called Corib meaning in the travellers' language "Fight" - and regular social activities is the true intentiobegarars ara

The local authorities, however, have cut off the public pumps in the area in order to deprive the families of a water supply. Men are also engaged fencing up all possible alternative sites.

To organise fresh protests at this situation, a London Committee of Itinerant Action International will, it is hoped, be established at a meeting at the Lucas Arms, 245 Grays Inn Road, London W.C.1, at 8 p.m. today, August 14, and that this committee will be representative of a number of organisations concerned with peace and social justice.

Published by Peace News Ltd, 5 Caledonian Road, London N.1, and printed in Great Britain by Goodwin Press Ltd, 135 Fonthill Road, London N.4.

had no justification and that they reflected the disastrous consequences of United States policy in South East

"The war in South Vietnam," the statement says, "is a popular national revolution which has a non-communist leadership and massive national popular backing. The war is conducted despite the offer of all parties but the Americans to accept a neutral solution in accordance with the Geneva conferences of 1954 and 1962. The war in South Vietnam has seen seven million people placed in barbed wire camps patrolled by machine gun bearing guards and police dogs. 160,000 have died, 700,000 have been maimed, 350,000 imprisoned and 16,000 internment camps constructed by the end of 1963.

"In one year, 50,000 air attacks were ence?"

damage to the United States apart from the horrible suffering it has caused the people of Vietnam.

The United States must be made to stop this war and to agree to the request of U Thant and of world opinion to negotiate now. The Geneva 14-nation vened after a cease-fire.

such as that held in 1954 or condemn American people would feel/if foreign the United States as an aggressor. The and unfriendly warships were cruising alternative will be acquiescence in off our own shores thousands of miles American extension of this war to the from their home base. We urge with-North, the involvement of China, and, drawal of the Seventh Fleet from the quite inexorably, a world war. This Gulf of Tonkin and of American troops must not be permitted. What worse can from South Vietnam, and steps to Goldwater do, if the men who claim to abandon policies based on nuclear milioppose him do so by outbidding him tary force and to place the vast resources in madness and suicidal belliger of this nation at the disposal of the President Johnson, said:

"The Committee for Non-violent Action deplores the attack made by United States warships and planes on North Vietnamese vessels and installations. The whole policy of American military intervention in Vietnam and the attempt to conference should be immediately con- police South-East Asia and other distant parts of the world is politically and "I hope the United Nations will demand morally wrong and bound to lead to American agreement to a conference disaster. Let us reflect on how the needy of the earth."

Colour bar strike in Glasgow

David Healy reports: About half the 500 made to the management without effect the Transport and General Workers' bus drivers and conductors at the Old during the past few weeks, a striker Union, told the crews that the union will Kilpatrick depot of the Scottish Motor said. Transport Company, near Glasgow, Mr Arthur Newman, traffic manager of staged two strikes last week over the the company, said later that this was the employment of coloured workers.

The strikes - on Monday, August 3, and Saturday, August 8 - each lasted no more than a few hours.

The strikers claimed that coloured work- Eighteen men out of the total force at ers are willing to work unusual shifts would not tolerate. The employment of depot shortly from training school. coloured crews has been increased re- After Monday's strike Mr William first time there had been any trouble about colour, and it came as a surprise. No representations had been made to him by the union, he said.

the depot are coloured, he added, and and under conditions which white crews a further eight workers will join the

cently and representations have been Scholes, Scottish regional secretary of

not support any action to prevent the employment of coloured people.

The shop steward for the bus crews. Mr Adam Conn, would not speak of a colour bar - he would only refer to "foreign workers." There was high unemployment in the area, and the demand was for an agreed percentage of foreign workers. He did not say what this percentage should be.

Mr Joseph Gilroy of the Transport and General Workers' Union again stated that no action which discriminated against coloured people would win union support.

On Sunday, August 9, the crews who had taken part in the strike on Saturday claimed that they had been locked out. Mr Adam Conn said: "The management have refused to allow all those who took part in the strike yesterday to go on shift today (Sunday). They have been told to come back tomorrow.

"This is not a question of colour bar." he added. "In an area of high unemployment we should look after our own first without giving jobs to immigrants."

The bar on foreign workers, Mr Conn said, does not include people from Southern Ireland.

He said that recently in the conductors' training school 16 new conductors were taken in and eight of them were coloured.

Mr Conn refused to comment on a statement that the crews intended to hold a The Army was "quite happy" with the strike every Saturday until their depresent system of training. It had found mands are met. He only said that whatever happens will depend on the outcome of talks between the management and the union.

NZ army rejects conscription

A. C. Barrington writes from New was commenting on a remit passed by Zealand: A conference of the New Zealand National Party (the party of the present Holyoake Government) recently passed a resolution urging the reintroduction of universal compulsory military training. At present only a proportion, selected by ballot, of those reaching the age of twenty are required to train, and there is provision for the exemption of conscientious objectors. This limited selection by ballot was introduced by the National Party Government on coming to power four years ago after the Labour Government had abolished the previous limited service scheme.

On July 29, the Wellington paper The Dominion carried this report:

"The New Zealand Army has rejected the idea of universal compulsory military training, the Chief of the General Staff, Major General L. W. Thornton, said training than the 18-year-olds called up in Dunedin today. General Thornton in the previous system.

the National Party conference urging the Government to reintroduce the universal system.

"We considered the universal system of training at the time when limited service was proposed, General Thornton said, but on the Army side, we rejected the idea of universal compulsory military training. After all, there is no point in training men unless you are training them for a particular national force with particular requirements.

"For that sort of force you must have the equipment. The Government has decided it can only provide equipment for one brigade group and its necessary support groups for overseas."

the 20-year-olds responded better to